SUMMARY.

British and French forces under Sir Douglas Haig, assisted by tanks, delivered a surprise attack on Thursday.

The British Fourth Army and the French First Army attacked on a wide front east and south-east of Amiens, at dawn.

Sir Douglas Haig reports that operations were begun by the French First Army, under General Debeny, and the British Fourth Army, under General Rawlinson.

The Allied troops assembled under cover of night, unobserved by the enemy.

At the hour of assault the French, Canadian, Australian, and English divisions, assisted by tanks, stormed a front of over 20 miles.

The enemy was surprised. The Allies made rapid progress at all points.

At an early hour the Allies' first objectives were reached on the whole front.

During the morning the infantry's advance continued, and was actively assisted by British cavalry and light tanks.

The German resistance was overcome at certain points after sharp fighting.

By 3 o'clock in the afternoon all objectives had been gained. Seven thousand prisoners and 100 guns were taken.

Reports from the Moreuil region are most optimistic. The Germans were offering slight resistance.

The French and British between Moreuil and Morlancourt made a substantial advance to a depth of about 4000 yards.

The maximum advance represents between seven and eight miles, the average extent of the advance being five miles. Many villages have been taken.

The British captured Hamer Wood, Dodo Wood, and the towns of Marcelcave and Lamotte-en-Santerre.

Unofficial messages state that the British centre has reached Harbonnieres, six miles east of Villers-Bretonneux.

Additional American forces have crossed the Vesle west of Fismes. They are meeting counter-attacks.

The Germans are attempting, by means of barrages, to prevent further crossings.

The Australian Press learns that Germans hold the Vesle line in considerable strength, though it is reported they have withdrawn their heavy guns.

Some forces are over the Aisne. There are no preparations for a general retirement at present.

It is thought probable that the withdrawal in the Lys sector, however, may be the preliminary to a general withdrawal.

A review of the Marne offensive records Marshal Foch's remarkable patience and foresight when the British sustained a reverse.

Foch met one German blow after another, but refused to make a premature counter-offensive until the Germans were exhausted.

"We are justified in saying," remarks the Australian Press correspondent, "that the situation is more favourable than at any time since 1914."

"We have overwhelming evidence of Germany's declining man-power, and can say the end is in sight."

"Humanly speaking, if we hold fast," the correspondent adds, "we can achieve a crushing victory over Germany in the field."

The political and moral situation of the Central Powers, it is pointed out, may tend to hasten the end.

Recent Allied air raids forced the enemy to detach a large number of fighting machines from the front to protect German towns.

The output of war material in the Rhine provinces has been greatly reduced owing to the Allied air raids having destroyed factories.

The Bolshevik Government is doing its utmost to overwhelm the Czechs before they can receive Allied support.

An American soldier, who is in Sydney spending his final leave, says the Australian soldier is highly thought of in America.

"We regard him as being very much akin to the American, with his happy-go-lucky style," remarked the visitor yesterday.

The Federal Treasurer states that every centre that reaches its quota of the Seventh War Loan will be recognised by the nation.

An honour flag is to be awarded in such cases, and the flag will be flown on all great occasions.

Provision has been made for special marks of honour for municipalities and shires that go beyond their quota.

Thirty-one men were accepted at the Central Recruiting Depot on Thursday.

Sixteen volunteers in the country were accepted, making the total for the day 47.

The King's Men movement continues to attract loyal citizens, the membership being considerably increased yesterday.

The Minister for Repatriation wrote to the Turon Shire Council, asking it to give absolute preference to returned soldiers.

The Northern March to Freedom Column was accorded an enthusiastic welcome at Tenterfield.

Mr. R. W. D. Weaver, M.L.A., for Willoughby, has enlisted for active service.

A man was sentenced to six months' imprisonment yesterday for having falsely represented himself to be a returned soldier.

Mr. Edward MacFarlane, formerly Under-Secretary for Lands, died yesterday at Paddington.

The Trades Union Congress devoted yesterday's sitting to considering the scheme for the reorganisation of the unions.

It was decided that the supreme governing body should be termed the grand council.

The work of settling returned soldiers on the land is making progress in the Albury district.

The Victorian organiser of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers states that the strike is not likely to spread. About 4000 men are idle.

A number of firms, he remarks, have agreed to grant the 20 per cent. increase in wages.

The secretary of the Sydney district says the question of increased wages was discussed by the engineers in Sydney.

The employees had asked for a conference with the Employers' Federation to discuss the rate of wages.

The application was practically based upon the increased cost of living.

The Shipwreck Relief Society has granted a silver medal to Mr. S. F. Harrison for bravery in the rescue of three men at South Head.

The Federal Prices Commissioner held an inquiry concerning stocks and prices of poisons, as affecting rabbit destruction.

Witnesses stated that stocks of phosphorus and strychnine were low, and difficulty was experienced in getting further supplies.

Mr. Beeby has decided to re-register the Trolly, Draymen, and Carters' Union.

Mr. James, in an address at the Bathurst High School, referred to the question of national economy.

If economy were effected in his department, he said, the building of schools would have to cease.

The Cabinet has decided not to join in the arrangement for raising State loans through the Federal authority.

Port Melbourne hotelkeepers are protesting against the closing of the hotels during the embarkation and disembarkation of troops.

Business was rather active in investment scrip yesterday, and a firmer market ruled generally.

There was a healthy tone in the mining market, and a marked advance in prices took place.

Barrier silver stocks set a strong lead. Tin concerns also advanced.

There was no butter on sale in Sussex-street yesterday, and no fresh supplies are expected before Monday.

Bacon sold freely. Eggs were slightly firmer.

Another advance took place in the price of onions. The best samples commanded to £23 a ton.

Jute met with a good inquiry. Country storekeepers operated freely in cornsacks at 10/1 on rail.

Forecast.—Cloudy and cool to cold generally, with scattered rain over the eastern and south-eastern districts, including coast; but rain contracting to the coast and highlands, snow on the southern tablelands.

A SUGGESTION FROM ANDERSON'S CALENDAR FOR AUGUST.

Many folks who love gardening find themselves at fault in not always making provision for Sowing Seeds EARLY—and frequently something happens to the late-sown stuff that just spoils it at a time when it would be of use. Here, therefore, is the suggestion taken from our "WHAT, WHEN, AND HOW TO SOW:"

IN PREPARED BEDS SOW

TOMATOES, PURPLE EGG PLANT, CAPSICUMS, CAPE GOOSEBERRY, BRUSSEL'S SPROUTS, CABBAGE, LEEK. Take Tomatoes for a start: nothing better than Earliana, Early Jewel, Early Ruby, (early) Matchless, Burwood Prize, Red Stone (medium), Ponderosa, Crimson Cushion (late). All in 3d or 6d Packets.

PURPLE EGG PLANT, a delicious item when cooked. CAPSICUMS, large sort for Baking. CABBAGE, Anderson's Pedigree. Etc., Etc.

Our Pamphlet, "WHAT, WHEN, AND HOW TO SOW," is Free to all. Send for one, it is right up to date.

LOW-PRICED TABLE CUTLERY, MADE IN SHEFFIELD, ENGLAND.

There is no doubt about it—prices are necessarily high at the present time. Everybody knows it, and knows also that it is the natural corollary of war conditions. I am, however, happily able to offer the articles enumerated below at LOW PRICES, and although the stock is large, an early visit would possibly prevent disappointment, as many of the patterns we cannot replace till the war is over.

We have a large and well-assorted stock of Table and Dessert Knives, from 10/6 per half-dozen. Among these are some beautiful designs at pre-war prices. CARVING KNIVES and FORKS, about 50 different patterns, from 10/6 per pair. BREAD KNIVES, from 1/ each. A full range of Sheffield Plate, in Old English Spoons and Forks. A and B. quality plated with sterling silver. Also imitation Silver Spoons and Forks.

W. JNO. BAKER, "The House of Steel," 3 Hunter-street, Sydney.

AUSTRAL SAC SUITS TO MEASURE, AT 75/.

At seventy-five shillings we feature an "Austral" Sac Suit to measure which offers the maximum in tailoring values at the lowest prices consistent with real economy.

Fabrics may be chosen from an attractive range of Suitings of Australian and English Tweeds, in a wide variety of designs and colourings, of which we have just received fresh stocks.

The whole of the work is done on our own premises, at 484-490 George-street; the finished garments afford a striking example of good value, and meet every expectation of fit and style.

CARRIAGE IS PAID ON ALL COUNTRY ORDERS.

THE VICTORY OF BEAUTY.

In addition to the battle of nations now in progress, the ordinary every-day battles of life are still being waged in our midst. Not the least of these is the battle fought daily against TIME, STRESS, WORRY, and many other enemies of that birthright of woman—HER BEAUTY.

The combat is not just a matter of "PANDERING TO VANITY," but is the outcome of a desire for the help and impetus, socially, professionally, or psychologically, which the possession of beauty or good looks undoubtedly affords.

THERE NEED BE NO QUESTION OF DEFEAT, FOR VICTORY IS CERTAIN IF THE TREATMENT BY THE VIOLET RAY IS EMPLOYED. This wonderful system will keep the skin soft, smooth, and fresh, removing impurities that may be marring the perfect clearness and beauty WITHOUT COSMETICS. Practically every complexion requires different treatment, and in this connection the most careful discrimination is used by me personally.

WHAT IS ELOCUTION?
A SCIENCE AND AN ART.
The Music Master teaches his pupils scales for a year at least, if not two before he allows them to sing a song. Some Elocution (?) Teachers make the pupil recite at first. This is waste of money, and leads nowhere, technical instruction must be given.

SUCCESS IS ASSURED BY KEEPING POULTRY "THORPE'S WAY."

At the recent Hawkesbury College Poultry Conference Principal Potts emphasised the importance of feeding "Balanced Rations."
A Balanced Ration is one in which the various food elements, such as Protein, Carbohydrates, Fats, etc., are present in just the right proportions to enable the hen to manufacture eggs and plenty of them.
The ration must also be palatable and digestible.
How can YOU be sure of these points? ONLY by feeding "Thorpe's Way."
Thousands are doing it, and find it cheapest by results.

MACHINERY.

LOSS OF POWER IS A SHORT CUT TO LOSS OF PROFITS.
An idle Belt means idle machinery, and idle machinery has idle employees as partners. Stops and slippage are the chief causes of loss in power and profits.
DICK'S BALATA BELTING (The Original and Genuine) stands for greater Efficiency. It stretches less than any other Belt. With ordinary care it will not slip. Costs the least for upkeep, and has been proved as a result of a quarter of a century's experience to be the strongest Belting made.

PAIGE, USED-CAR DEPOT, WORKSHOPS AND GARAGE.

A new Car depreciates from 20 to 30 per cent. the first year. A good, guaranteed, rebuilt Car or Lorry with a written guarantee, bought at the right price, is a better investment than a cheap new Car, and is a profitable investment that after years of service only shows a low rate of depreciation.

We have a number of the leading makes of Cars and Lorries, both European and American, at very reasonable prices. Your small Car taken as part payment. Write to us, and we will send you full particulars.

ALL OVER — BUICK. — THE COUNTRY.

DELIVERY FROM STOCK.

The first time for eighteen months we are now in a position to deliver Touring Cars from stock.

Commencing next week, we can give immediate delivery of Buicks with Australian bodies in seven-seaters.

We can also give delivery of single-seater six-cylinder cars.

Delivery of Six-cylinder Touring Cars, with imported bodies, as six vessels en route, some of which are now due.

YOU ARE ADVISED TO BOOK EARLY.

1918 MODEL IS THE BEST CAR BUICK EVER MADE.

All Cars, so far as our experience goes, develop some signs of a weakness after several thousands of miles of running, yet after several instances of 10,000 miles of hard hiring work, no such signs are noticeable in the 1918 BUICK.

ACROSS N.S.W., S.A., AND VICTORIA.

Last April a seven-seater 1918 Buick went across N.S.W. to Broken Hill, across country to Adelaide, miles away from the main road, and back through Victoria and Western Riverina, without a stop of any kind, and averaged 23 1-3 miles per gallon.

THE 1918 BUICK IS MADE TO LAST.

Wearing parts are bigger and stronger—lubrication improved in every detail—very strong axles and differential.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS.

It is about four years ago that it first became known that Dodge Brothers would make complete motor cars instead of manufacturing essential automobile parts in gigantic volume for others. The news travelled rapidly in the automobile trade and was received with an interest and respect that was almost inexplicable, considering the limited circle to whom Dodge Brothers were known by direct contact. Before Dodge Brothers themselves announced anything concerning their car, thousands of Agents, including the shrewdest and most important in all parts of U.S.A., and foreign countries, had applied for territorial rights, because of the conviction that if Dodge Brothers were to make automobiles those automobiles would be "right."

The progress of the Dodge Brothers' Car throughout the world represents a record achievement in the Automobile Industry. This is the answer to those "Wise men of the East," those astute dealers from near and far, who were able to see clearly into the future of a car conceived and manufactured at the Dodge Brothers' plant.

FIVE-PASSENGER CARS AND ROADSTERS IN STOCK.

DALGETY AND COY., LTD., 136 PHILLIP-STREET, SYDNEY.

THE COMING OF A GREAT ENGINE.

IT PRODUCES MORE POWER OUT OF A SMALLER QUANTITY OF LOWER-GRADE PETROL.

Petrol quality is declining, perhaps for every as now the problem is to handle this low-grade petrol effectively, to completely vaporise it, so that only a gas is drawn into the cylinders.

As difficult situations produce great men, so out of this condition has come a great engine.

THE CHALMERS LIGHT SIX.

Compared with other engines of the same size or thereabouts, it shows

MORE POWER,
MORE RAPID ACCELERATION,
MORE ACCESSIBILITY,
GREATER ECONOMY,
GREATER SMOOTHNESS,
AND AMAZING QUICKNESS IN STARTING IN COLD WEATHER.

This Chalmers Engine is a simple one. That is one reason why it is so good.

The intake pipe leads the gas to the cylinders by the shortest route, after it has passed through the Chalmers "Hot Spot," a vaporising device just above the carburettor, where the air and petrol are thoroughly mixed.

This is all there is to it—it is too simple to get out of order, and wonderfully effective.

Write for a booklet, describing this high-grade car.

Also Agents for—"OAKLAND," "SCRIPPS-BOOTH," "REDDEN TRUCK-MAKERS." [illegible]

DUNLOP "RAILROAD" RED RUBBER NON-SKID COVER.

This Tyre will serve you better than any other—it's a wonderful wearing cover—thousands of miles of running showing very little wear on the tough, high-grade, thick, and patterned tread. It will stand up to the amount of tests. It's the equal of any tyre in the world for quality, construction, and mileage—yet costs you less to buy than any imported cover, because the price to you is not loaded by heavy ocean freights and duty.

DUNLOP "RAILROAD,"

the tyre that has already pleased thousands of Motorists. When are you going to avail yourself of its economy and dependability?

DUNLOP RUBBER CO. OF AUST., LTD.

NASH "6."

The Name itself is a sufficient guarantee of quality and efficiency. An Owner writes:—

"UP TO THE PRESENT THE CAR HAS RUN 8500 MILES WITHOUT A STOP. THE GUARD FOR ITSELF."

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

June and its Delights.

LONDON, June 6.

If ever June justified her reputation of being the queen of the summer season she is doing that now. I defy anyone to find more perfect weather than we are enjoying at this moment. May led the van, and the joyousness of real summer has continued. I have just returned from a week on the upper reaches of the Thames at Shiplake, adjoining Henley, so familiar to you all who knew the river during the Henley week of the times before the war. It is at its best just now, though the merry freights of the punts and skiffs are more or less dispersed. The river is strangely silent and still. You meet parties of women, and at times wounded men and officers, in punts. I can imagine no better place for a rest cure than that part of the river.

The broad reaches are clothed on the overhanging heights with trees in all the richness of June foliage. Later the trees are too dark in colour for beauty. But just now the colours would distract a painter. Copper beech elbows the chestnut still burdened with pink and white trusses of bloom. There are oaks, looking young in bright green, elms, rustling poplars and aspens, while the laburnums and lilacs are only just going off. The many tones of May blossom have been somewhat spoilt by the intensity of the May sun, which withered the flowers all too soon. The number of beautiful houses and gardens which fringe the banks increase every year. If the season were not so dry the gardens would be better. Labour, too, is scarce, and watering is difficult owing to this circumstance. The roses are beginning to show well, and the herbaceous borders will before a week elapses be bright with delphiniums, larkspurs, pinks, and many other delights of the garden. Fruit gives cause for anxiety. I fear it is a lean season, like the hay crop, which is scant and short.

One revels in the beautiful colouring and the fine spaces of sky lines as one gets away from London, which is warm and light just now. We do not draw the blinds until 10 p.m., and hardly use any gas or electric light. So far we have been free of raids ever since Whitsunday. But to-day I was told that the authorities have been expecting daylight raids. The special constables have been warned, so I imagine there is some fear of the Germans repeating their tactics of last June and July, when they sailed over London during brilliant forenoons. Our great amusement is to watch the searchlights each evening trying to pick up aeroplanes. The whole sky is crossed with brilliant rays, and you see a tiny, bright object glistening with light. This tries hard to elude the beams which follow it everywhere. It is excellent practice, I should think, and as a consequence it is said that we are on the alert for daylight raids. Our nights are so short now that any extended operations would not be possible. Over and over again I have looked out into the sky between midnight and early dawn, and have always found an echo of the day that has gone joining hands with the coming "rosy fingered dawn." We shall grudge the shortening of daylight when it comes. This is but a fleeting joy.

Dress and Fashion.

I have seldom seen so many pretty summer gowns. There is a plethora of dainty voile and light silk dresses. The printing of the voiles is delightful, and the make of the gowns dainty. On the river I saw some charming pale yellow costumes in cotton crepe, and also blouses of yellow, worn with white skirts. Most young people prided themselves on striking a note of colour in the cushions of their punts and skiffs. Some were of pale bright apple green, here was yellow, and again were tones of purple. The parasol, too, plays its part. Many girls go in solely for Japanese umbrellas. Older people have silk parasols of some special colour. It is this feast of colour, combined with the surroundings of water and overhanging branches, which makes the river so entrancing. It is also a highway where you meet your friends, and hail them as you pass along. People are discussing their summer plans already. It is difficult to get rooms either at the seaside or in the country, and the railways make it anything but comfortable to travel. Already shady hats, trimmed with beautiful ties of ribbon, are being shown. Here and there one sees a smart hat. There is, in fact, a little more trimming allowed—but in the way of flowers chiefly. Some of the small toques are simply chenille masses of flowers, with a large meshed veil edged with black spots thrown carelessly over. Other hats are high crowned with broad brims, but turning up sharp at the back, with flowers laid on either side where the brim is upturned.

While away I had the temerity to alter the trimming of a hat from a celebrated milliner. I turned up its brim behind, and made large mauve clematis for either side, with a bud or two and some green tendrils fashioned out of one of the new embroidery twists. It was most successful. The colour of the straw was raven's wing blue, so the mauve clematis suited it beautifully. In case you have not made clematis I will tell you how I went to work. I had some brown ribbon. It may be silk, satin, velvet, or moire, as you please. I first cut out in cardboard a model of the petal; you know it, of course—a pointed petal, broader in the centre. I cut two for each petal, and ran them neatly together, turning each one inside out when done. Then I introduced a loop of fine wire. I made four petals, and joined them together "star shape." For the centre I took a large ordinary linen button, put some wadding on it, and then covered it with pale green moire, sewing it firmly at the back after running it round. Then I took some ordinary narrow ribbon, and worked loosely loops of it on the button till it was a mass of loops. I sewed this down on the centre of each flower, and the "illusion" or "imitation," as you take it, was complete. It is a very easy flower to make, and wide moire ribbon makes these flowers well. The buds were easy. I merely gathered some scraps tightly, and cut a base of dull green ribbon, and tucked them under the hat band. The tendrils were made by twisting pale green embroidery fibres—Vicars Salome twist, to be exact—and sewing them down with tie stitches. The friend for whom I operated was charmed, and my efforts are crowned by the honour of her having made that hat her best one! Seriously, these hand-made silk flowers are very decorative. I lately made myself a thin black blouse, lining the cuffs, revers, and collar with bright green Shantung. I edged the different portions with dull gold passementerie, and on the single revers I placed a white rose made of silk, with a cluster of shaded green leaves, and another adjoining the collar. It has quite a novel and becoming effect.

I am contriving a black lace jumper, which has a jetted border and a square neck, opening rather low on the shoulders, carried out in black velvet ribbon. On either shoulder will come a cluster of pale mauve clematis, with leaves and tendrils. It will be a useful garment, easily carried about, and slipped on for dinner. The jet lace round the bottom keeps the garment well down. A cream lace thing of this order would be useful to a girl visiting or for theatre wear, done with a fringe of crystal beads, and either beads round the neck opening or flowers made of narrow ordinary ribbon outlining the neck. Or, as I have said, a cluster of large flowers on each shoulder.

SHIPWRECK RELIEF SOCIETY.

At the monthly meeting of the Royal Shipwreck Relief and Humane Society yesterday, in the Royal Exchange, a silver medal was granted to Mr. S. F. Harrison for conspicuous bravery in the rescue of three men at the cliff, South Head, on July 16 last, and a certificate of merit was granted to Mr. J. S. Barracluff for his part in the rescue. A bronze medal was granted to Miss Jean Cooper, 10 years of age, for bravery at the Spit Baths in the attempted rescue of two girls in February last. Certificates of merit were granted to Lieutenant J. S. Whitelaw and Mr. Alan Edwards for the rescue of a man named John Osborne at Watson's Bay on July 6. Several other cases were deferred for further inquiries.

LABOUR'S CHANGING IDEALS.

TRADES UNIONISM VERSUS SOCIALISM.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

LONDON, June 4.

The Minister for Labour, Mr. G. H. Roberts, last week delivered a speech which has emphasised the already obvious fact that the world of labour is in a condition of flux and change. Among other noteworthy remarks, Mr. Roberts made this one: "The past is dead. The old cries, the old shibboleths, have gone, never more to be resuscitated. We cannot allow mere sentimentalism to guide us." And the interpretation of that remark is to be found in the fact that the occasion of this speech by the Minister for Labour was a "welcome home" given by the Industrial League to the members of the British Labour Delegation to the United States, who have just returned to England, that, though the mission of those gentlemen was completely successful, it had to win its success in the teeth of an effort by American Labour extremists to discredit it, and that here in Britain the Labour views it represents are opposed by a section of British Labour extremists, who did their best to spoil its chances of justifying itself in the eyes of the Labour world of the United States. When these facts are remembered, the speech of Mr. Roberts, and the expression of similar sentiments made at this reunion by other Labour leaders, are disclosed as both a breakaway from and a defiance of the Labour factions who here, as in our own country, threaten all the hard-won political triumphs of Labour of the moderate type with chaos and disaster.

The quarrel here, as with ourselves, is between a balanced conception of the means demanded by the end desired, and an unbalanced extremism which drives blindly on to an unrealisable goal by way of crude extremism, violence, and disorder. It is rapidly coming to be a quarrel between trade unionism and socialism, and it has been precipitated as such a quarrel by the war. For the war has disclosed what a cleavage there is between that magnificent patriotism of the trade union world, which has revealed itself in the sustained and boundless energy of the workers in these recent years, and the marvels it has wrought for Britain—what a cleavage there is between that splendour of effort and the unpatriotic slackness, when it has not been open disloyalty, the recklessness, the blindness, the insanity, even, of these bogus Labour partisans who, whether as internationalists, pacificists, defeatists, or whatever else, all along have played the German game. More clearly than ever is it seen by the real guides and guardians of Labour thought and Labour aspiration that the triumph of the ideas of the extremist factions means the downfall of the best hopes of Labour.

Leaders of Labour such as Mr. Roberts, and those who are with him, and the vast majority of the workers themselves, have a clear vision of the disaster which waits upon their alliance in any sort of sympathy with the minority factions. They see quite plainly that to temporise now with socialists who cry for the moon attaches them to the egregious and everywhere discredited groups of extremists whose professions of brotherhood are such pleasant hearing for the German Socialists, for example; the German Socialists who, bound body and soul to the juggernaut of German militarism, long since were revealed as Germans first and Socialists afterwards. And they see that to attach Labour to such as these are would be to destroy the strongly building fabric of Labour's political power. With a vastly extended franchise in its possession, and an expanded constitution which admits to its membership exponents of most of the working professions and avocations of British life, is it to be dreamt that Labour will allow the rebel fanatics by whom it is burdened to alienate all that potential increase of its support, and to turn the sympathy and allegiance of millions of moderate men who now for the first time are moving towards union with it, into an antagonism which might easily be fatal, and would certainly check and spoil its progress into power—is it to be dreamt that Labour will risk all that for the sake of its noisy following of irresponsible visionaries? It is not. Labour, in our own country, compromised too often and too long with its fanatics, with the result we know. British Labour, if all the signs may be trusted, means to make no such mistake. It has, as our own moderate Labourites had not, until now, the revelations of the war to inspire and instruct it. The most illuminating of those revelations divides irremediably the unpatriotic associates of German Socialism from the essentially and spontaneously British patriots whom the war has tried and proved, and that division is both clear-cut and final.

How, precisely, the quarrel will issue is not yet to be seen, but it will probably modify most of the socialistic programme, which hitherto has been part and parcel of the Labour movement. In the speech herein referred to, Mr. Roberts was unsparing in his denunciation of the socialists of this country, who still regard the German socialist as a brother, and he said straight out: "Let there be no illusion on these matters. My colleagues in the Labour movement must define their attitude in the future, irrespective of old associations and old traditions. . . . . It is too late to discriminate between one class and another in Germany. The socialist equally with the junker is out for indemnities, and will never abandon that claim until the Allies prove themselves victorious. . . . The future of the Labour movement abides with the people who are represented here to-night." And Mr. Duncan, M.P., one of the returned delegation to America, after a reference to the similar attitude of the American Federation of Labour towards the socialists of that country, said: "The downfall of the Labour movement in this country will be its association with the socialist movement. It has brought nothing but division within our ranks. The trade-union movement is the greatest force in civilisation, and is strong enough to fight its corner successfully, without the assistance of the socialists."

This is indeed a change of mind. If it means anything at all it means an end of British Labour's allegiance not only to the Internationalism of the Marxians, who in this time of war are seen to be, if they are Germans, whole-hearted supporters of Prussian tyranny, and if they are British, mere lambs in the maw of ravening wolves, but its allegiance also to all the other brands of socialism which aim at the confiscation of individual wealth and the subordination of individual enterprise in favour of a millennium lived in the eternal sunshine of State control. It is already the opinion of Labour leaders here, indeed, that we are over-governed. That in itself is revolutionary opinion. It forecasts not the sweeping away of capitalism, not a continued fierce antagonism of capital and labour, employers and employed, individualists and levellers, but a recognition of the claims of each, and a merging of the demands of each in the common good. That way goes, finally, State socialism of the extreme type, hitherto so preached and prayed for. That way, in other words, is to come the new rapprochement between class and class, which seems already to be visible as a harmonious coalition of the ideals of a wisely-ordered Labour movement and the powers and possibilities of an enlightened capitalism. Its practical result is obvious. For in that new world Labour will have moved with a giant stride out of its class limitations, and the vast bulk of the British electorate will be workers and voters for a Labour movement which, having thrown off the hopeless impediments of anarchical extravagance, climbs easily to its goal untramelled, light-footed, and assured.

"BEST PAID TROOPS."

(BY A.J.B.)

Four soldiers sat chatting in Sydney yesterday. As is usually the case when soldiers meet, the conversation turned to the question of military pay, and interesting comparisons resulted. The conclusion arrived at was that Australian troops were best paid. America came next, and New Zealand third. "Leave me out. I'm not playing," said the British soldier. It was by no means an easy matter to make a comparison between the pay of the three armies, for the American N.C.Os. and men, according to a Government table, are paid so many dollars a month, and the officers by the year. Further, New Zealand officers, in addition to their military pay, draw allowances on similar lines to those enjoyed by officers of the British Army.

An Australian soldier receives 6/ a day as military pay, apart from separation allowance, which is not taken into consideration in making comparisons between our own and other military pay. The American and New Zealand soldier both receive 5/ a day. We find a very considerable discrepancy between the pay of the corporal of the three armies. Ten shillings a day is paid to the Australian, 6/ to the New Zealander, and 5/6 to the American. It has been said that "Australian rates of pay were fixed by a corporal." This may be so. At any rate, it is curious that the Australian corporal should receive 10/ a day, and the Australian sergeant only 6d a day more. As a sergeant he may very probably have to take a platoon of 45 men "over the top" in the first stunt that follows his promotion. He is responsible as a senior non-commissioned officer for the appearance, meals, discipline, equipment, and so forth, of these men when they are both in and out of the trenches. No man would for a minute belittle the work a corporal is called upon to perform; but he has not the responsibility of the sergeant, whom the late Lord Kitchener styled "the backbone of the army." In France to-day it is by no means uncommon to hear the cry "Carry on, sergeant."

It will thus be seen that the Australian private is better paid than the American or New Zealander to the extent of approximately a shilling a day, whilst the Australian corporal is "out on his own." It is rather an anomaly that the Australian pay warrant does not provide pay for the lance-corporal, as is the case in other armies; but the Australian authorities evidently hold that, as the corporal receives such a handsome rate of pay, aspirants should serve a probationary period before being awarded the rank. Nobody works harder or gets more abuse than the lance-corporal, to whom the majority of orders generally filter through. The sergeants of the three armies under review draw pay as follows:—Australian, 10/6 a day; American, 6/6, and New Zealand, 7/. When we come to the regimental sergeants-major, it is seen that the Australian easily tops the bill with a daily rate of 14/. R.S.M.'s of the American and New Zealand armies get 9/ a day.

America's scale of pay is calculated to stimulate ambition. If the private thinks that 5/ a day is too little to provide for his earthly needs, he is assured of £1 a day as a 2nd lieutenant, which is only a shilling a day less than the Australian rate, but as soon as the American has made good as a "lone star artist," as the troops term officers with one star, he gets a daily increase of pay of 3/4 a day. The Australian officer with one star does not receive an increase of pay when he hoists his second star. He has to wait until he wins his captaincy. The New Zealand lieutenant is not so well off as his contemporary away with American or Australian units, for his pay as lieutenant is only 12/ a day. The American captain gets 28/ a day, the Australian 26/, and the New Zealander 17/6. Australian majors are better off than the Americans. They receive 35/ a day, which is slightly more than the Americans get. A captain of the New Zealand force is paid a guinea a day, or just as much as the Australian 2nd lieutenant. An Australian lieutenant-colonel with 45/ a day gets 5/ a day more than the American, and a pound a day more than the New Zealander. The advantage is still with the Australian officer when colonel's pay is compared, the rates being 53/, 46/, and 30/ respectively, but America makes a handsome allowance for brigadiers-general. Australia does not. An American brigadier draws approximately 70/ a day, whereas an Australian officer who is given a brigade does not receive an increase of pay beyond that granted a colonel, viz., 53/.

The comparison made between the pay of the Australian, American, and New Zealand forces therefore shows that, except in the case of the first lieutenant, captain, and brigadier-general, who draw more pay in the American army than in the A.I.F., our rates of pay are the best. A New Zealand officer oversea is entitled to a number of allowances not awarded to the Australian officer, but these allowances do not bring the pay of the officer of the Dominion up to Australian rates.

Many people who have seen the Australian soldier on furlough in Cairo, London, Paris, and on leave in the back areas of France, hold the opinion that, owing to his prosperous appearance and the facilities afforded him to be generous, he is the best advertisement Australia could have abroad at a time like the present. By the aid of the Australian pound-note—known to troops as the "frog-skin"—he has caused millions of people all over the United Kingdom, France, Egypt, and other places to make inquiries about a land little known previous to the war among a large section of the workers of Europe, whose troops are paid only a fraction of the rates provided by the peoples of the new world. Some of the States of America make a small addition to the pay granted to members of the Draft Army—that is, the oversea force—to bring up their pay to the level of that paid to members of the National Guard. Separation allowances are paid by the Federal Government, as they are here, and in addition the Government insures men who have dependents.

AMERICAN SOLDIER.

ON FINAL LEAVE IN SYDNEY.

Pte. Jim Dunlop, a member of the American army, is in Sydney spending his final leave.

Chatting yesterday to a "Herald" representative, he said: "When we were being given final leave before being drafted to Europe I was in a different position from other men, because my folks were in Australia. This fact was communicated to the colonel, who in turn notified headquarters. They got into touch with Mr. Baker, the War Secretary of the United States, and he, after inquiry, granted me leave to visit my parents before sailing for the front.

"The Australian soldier is very highly thought of in the States," continued Pte. Dunlop. "We regard him as being very much akin to the American, with his happy-go-lucky style, which always brings him out on top in the end. He is better paid than we are, but we don't begrudge him the few extra dollars a month. As soon as a man joins the Australian army, from what I can see of things, he is a private of the first-class. Our private is not regarded as belonging to the first-class until he has worn uniform for six months. Then his pay becomes 33 dollars a month, or, in English money, a little less than 5s a day. We in America have a splendid pension scheme, and you haven't got it here. Out of my pay I hand the Government 6½ dollars every month, and in the event of my death in America, Europe, or other places, my mother, whom I have made my allottee, would receive 10,000 dollars. A married soldier in the States has to allot his wife 15 dollars a month out of his pay. The proportion he has to allot is less than is the case in this country.

"Our camps are very large, splendidly lighted, and equipped in every detail. We rise at 6 a.m., and must be in bed by 10.30 p.m. Lights are out at 9 p.m. There is no drink allowed in the camps. Troops are not given tea in the American army, for it has been found they thrive better on coffee. The meals are of the very best, and if we are not the best paid I'll wager we are the best fed. Sergeants' messes are not formed in America. A sergeant or other N.C.O. dines with the men, and sits at the head of the table. Civilians in America are not allowed white bread the same as is issued to the troops. They get war bread, which is dark in colour, and not so nice.

"Our drill is the same as yours, except that some of our words of command are different; but do not believe for a minute that such orders as 'guys stiffen,' 'eyes chuck,' and so on are given. The first I heard of them was in Sydney to-day."

Pte. Dunlop was entertained to luncheon yesterday by Mr. Heard, Mr. Burch, and other American business men in Sydney at the Australian-American Café, King-street. He returns to America by the Niagara, en route to France.

THE CHURCHES.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

There is a satisfactory atmosphere throughout the annual report of the Australian Board of Missions, which has just been issued. The chairman, the Rev. John Jones, in his statement, says that the year has been a record, the income of the board reaching £20,620, as compared with £18,583 the previous year. Despite adverse conditions consequent upon the war, the board has extended its sphere of work, and a new worker is proceeding this month to China. The Bishop of New Guinea, who contributes a report, shows that great progress is being made in missionary work on the east coast of Papua. There are over 1600 children in the day schools of the Anglican mission, and 697 baptisms took place during the year, whilst 900 are prepared for baptism. Six churches were dedicated during the year, and about twenty candidates are being prepared for the ministry. It is interesting to note that one church in New Guinea will hold easily 1800 people, and cost practically nothing to build, as the material was on the spot and the labour was given free. The A.B.M., under its new constitution, includes the Church Missionary Society as an agency of the Church in connection with the board, and its report is also included. The total income required for the whole of the work under the board for this year is £40,000.

The Archbishop of Sydney will preach at St. Andrew's Cathedral to-morrow morning, and at Erskineville in the evening. On Monday he will attend a meeting of the council of the Home Mission Society, and on Tuesday he will conduct a confirmation at St. Thomas' Church, North Sydney.

The Dean of Sydney is arranging a special service of commemoration of the Lone Pine charge for to-morrow evening, at St. Andrew's Cathedral, at 7 o'clock. Seats will be reserved for relations of those who fell and for returned soldiers. No tickets will be issued. The Dean will preach the sermon.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual conference at the New South Wales Church of England Men's Society, which will take place on Thursday and Friday, August 22 and 23, the Archbishop presiding.

The Rev. E. H. Bergman, M.A., newly appointed warden of St. John's Theological College, Armidale, has taken up his duties.

The Roman Catholic parish of Barraba and Bingara has been divided in two. Father Collender, who has had charge for 12 years, will in future be in charge of Bingara and Warialda. He will be succeeded at Barraba by Father Condsen.

CITY COUNCIL TENANTS.

Alderman Richards and Alderman Hagon yesterday introduced to the Lord Mayor a deputation from certain tenants in Queen Victoria-buildings. It was afterwards stated that, in connection with the alterations to the southern portion of the buildings, the council had decided that those tenants who desired to remain in business in that particular area should pay £50 by reason of their remaining there during the alterations, and the extra cost thus incurred to the contractors. The tenants, in asking for reconsideration of the matter, urged the point that no arrangement was made as regarded the penalty in question, and that they were promised that accommodation would be found for them if they desired it, in the remodelled area. The Lord Mayor promised consideration of their case.

LATE CAPTAIN JOHN GIBB.

The death has occurred of Captain John Gibb at the residence of his friend, Professor Watt, with whom he had been staying, in Billyard-avenue, Elizabeth Bay.

Prior to his retirement the late Captain Gibb was commodore of the Union Steamship Company's fleet, and was one of the most popular master mariners in Australia. He retired from the company's service about five years ago. At different periods of his career he commanded the largest ships in the company's service. He commanded the R.M.S. Makura when that vessel first entered the Canadian-Australian mail service. He was also the first commander of the Niagara, bringing the vessel out from England, and then across to Vancouver and back. The late Captain Gibb was 70 years of age, and was a native of Fife, Scotland.

The funeral, which took place at the Waverley Cemetery, was largely attended by representatives of the shipping and mercantile community. At the graveside the Rev. John Ferguson officiated, and among those present were the following:—Mrs. J. Forsyth, Messrs. David Mills, D. O. Ramsay, Professor Watt, Captain Calder, Captain Hamand, J. Smith, Captain Anderson, E. Rabbeta, Doherty (representing the Union Steamship Company, Ltd.), Cranford, Captain Crawford (of R.M.S. Makura), M. M'Allister (North Coast S.N. Co., Ltd.), Captain Stott, J. Forsyth, F. Thorpe, A. Kidman, Captain Sangster (Department of Navigation), Clutterbuck, and W. Grant.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE COCKPIT OF EUROPE.

"British Campaigns in Flanders" consists mainly of extracts from the Hon. J. W. Fortescue's monumental "History of the British Army" (which remains unfinished on account of the war), grouped so as to form a consecutive narrative, and amplified by notes and explanatory comments. Although the material is not, strictly speaking, new, it gains novelty from the method of arrangement, which presents in a continuous record the exploits of Britain in a theatre of war where she has fought more often and more gloriously than in all others put together. Long before 1914 British blood had moistened every foot of Flanders and Brabant. As soon as England began to engage in Continental enterprises she found that almost invariably the Low Countries became her battlefield. Nor was this surprising, for nature had made it inevitable that they should be the cockpit of Europe. The Low Countries were the predestined tilting ground for the great Powers of Europe, the nearest meeting place for friends and enemies alike. They have maintained their character from the days of Elizabeth to our own, and if the whole of the Low Countries have earned the name of the cockpit of Europe there is one area which, to pursue the metaphor, is the operating table.

This is a quadrilateral about a hundred miles long by fifty broad, with a great river to the west, a second to the east, and a third, of which Ghent is the key, midway between them. It is a densely populated and intensely cultivated area. "The earth fruitful by nature, and enriched by art, bears food for man and beast; the waterways provide transport for stores and ammunition. It was a country where men could kill each other without being starved," and so for centuries it has been the battlefield of Europe. Various things have combined to give warfare in Flanders a character of its own, which has remained to the present day. The terrain is thickly studded with walled towns and easily defensible villages, hence military operations tended to become stationary, and often resolved themselves into a series of sieges, whereby strong posts were successively reduced. This was a condition imposed by nature, but it was welcomed by the French, who were the first military nation in Europe and by their example influenced the development of tactics. The French had a pronounced taste for a war of sieges. "The Court of Versailles was particularly fond of a siege, since it could attend the ceremony in state, and take nominal charge of the operations with much glory and little discomfort and danger. The French passion for rule and formula also found a happy outlet in the conduct of a siege, for while there is no nation more brilliant and original, particularly in military matters, there is also none that is more pedantic." Hence war in Flanders has been traditionally not so much an affair of swift marching and manoeuvre as of hard pounding, in which respect it has anticipated this war.

The Hon. J. W. Fortescue describes in turn the campaigns of William III., of Marlborough, the war of the Austrian Succession, and that of the French Revolution down to 1794. His account brings home to us most vividly the unchanging quality of strategy and tactics. Their principles seem to have been affected but little by the development of arms; the modern commander tries to accomplish the same ends as the commander of 200 years ago by similar means. Often the objectives are identical; indeed, we sometimes feel that we are reading a record of contemporary events when we hear of the fighting on the Menin-road, the Scarpe, the Lys, Cambria, La Bassee, and a score of places with equally familiar names. The author revives the memories of many a bitter struggle, and incidentally destroys some cherished superstitions. One would not willingly lose the tale of the chivalrous preliminaries to the Battle of Fontenoy, when the English invited the French Guard to fire first, and the Guard replied, "No, gentlemen, we shall never fire first." The author assures us that it is legend, although by way of compensation he has unearthed some other tales of the ceremonious gallantry which often accompanied fighting in those days. He reminds us, too, that the British armies were by no means invariably victorious. On the balance of a campaign they were usually successful, but they had their ups and downs, the latter of which historians for the most part have been content patriotically to ignore. For instance, in the whole history of British arms there has never been a more miserable fiasco than the Duke of York's expedition in 1794. The troops went out ill-equipped, and were soon half naked. There were no drivers for the guns and commissariat; to meet this state of affairs a corps of "Royal Waggoners" was recruited from the scum of London, the gaols and hulks; they were known as the "Newgate Blues," and General Craig wrote of them pithily, "a greater set of scoundrels never disgraced an army." The ranks contained a large number of raw recruits who, according to the same officer, "do not know one end of a firelock from the other, and will never know it." But, worst of all, was the medical service; the state of the hospitals was simply deplorable; the authorities had considered the salaries required by respectable doctors to be exorbitant, and had improvised a staff out of "drunken apothecaries, broken-down practitioners, and rogues of every description." No wonder the expedition was a failure, yet as has been the case so often in the history of the British army, the courage and endurance of the rank and file almost redeemed the blundering and incompetence of the heads. (MacMillan.)

A SPORTING AND DRAMATIC CAREER.

In "A Sporting and Dramatic Career" Mr. A. E. Watson has set down the recollections of close upon 50 years' association with London journalism. Originally Mr. Watson, had theatrical ambitions of his own, but he found that his talent had better scope in discussing those of other people, and to the role of dramatic critic he added the somewhat inconsistent one of a sporting writer. He knew everyone worth knowing in the worlds of sport and stage. He was a friend of Sir Henry Irving and a dozen others who were then among the lesser luminaries, but have since attained the dignity of fixed stars. He was the confidant of both Gilbert and Sullivan, and mentions that though their partnership was inspired, it was not always smooth, for the partners were by no means inclined to underestimate the value of their respective contributions. He was a founder and original member of the Beefsteak Club, where Bohemians, professional and amateur, mingled with the representatives of sport and fashion. His book is full of pleasant gossip about the stage and the members of his very catholic acquaintanceship. He had his prejudices as a dramatic critic, which he frankly admits. One of them was against Italian opera, as interpreted in London in the 'Seventies; the reader can sympathise with his protests against the artificiality and conventionality of these performances when he hears that frequently the principals did not even know the plot of the opera which they were playing, did not meet until the first night, and sang their parts mechanically, without the slightest conception of what anyone was talking about.

Mr. Watson's sporting reminiscences deal largely with racing and hunting, with famous riders and famous horses, but are not confined to the turf. He edited and contributed to the Badminton Library an excellent series, in which experts have written about every conceivable branch of sport at home and abroad. In the midst of a busy career he found leisure for travel, in which his steps turned swiftly and surely to centres of sport and drama—for Mr. Watson invariably chose the busman's holiday. He has some interesting anecdotes to tell about Monte Carlo, and his verdict on the possibility of a successful gambling system are much to the point. No system, he is convinced, can get the better of the bank; the thing is mathematically impossible. The system may succeed for a shorter or longer period, but eventually is bound to fail, simply because the principle on which the bank is arranged is to bring in a steady average profit. The bank will infallibly win in the long run; gambling establishments are not eleemosynary institutions. (Macmillan.)

AUSTRALIAN VERSE.

Mr. Archibald T. Strong's reputation as a writer of scholarly and melodious verse will be enhanced by "Poems," a collection of fugitive work covering the last few years. Perhaps the distinctive quality of these verses is their literary character. Alike in his grave moods and gay, Mr. Strong's inspiration is books or their writers; the racy "Song of Herodotus," the fine sonnets on Meredith and Swinburne, the pleasant allusiveness of "Love in the Library" are cases in point, and the list could be multiplied. The sonnets on Arthur are typical of his attitude; so far from regretting that the Knights of the Round Table are creatures of romance and not real persons of history, he rejoices at it; for

These are the great unborn that never die;

And:

Only what ne'er hath been grows never old.

But although Mr. Strong's inspiration springs so often from books, his verse is never merely bookish; it is the graceful expression of a mind stored with the treasures of the past and keenly responsive to beauty in all its forms. Mr. Strong's poems have a literary content seldom found in Australian verse. We quote as an example of his work some lines from "Shakespeare in the South," written for the Shakespeare tercentenary, 1916.

Sure to the soul of thee their souls were true
Who scaled the sheer grey ridge and on and through
Hustled resistless, line on surging line,
Naught recking whether glory kissed or slew.

And in the rhythm of thy heart divine
Beat the brave hearts of them who at the sign
That flung them forth and over, routed Fate
And stormed the gates of Death at Lonesome Pine!

And we, who in the South must work and wait
Till victory come, may read with hearts elate
Our dear ones' glory in each page of thee
Where the soul triumphs over death and fate.

Knowing that all who battle, even as we
For the world's right with spirits brave and free,
And in our hearts thy music, must prevail
Exultant as the sunrise o'er the sea.

AUSTRALIA IN THE WAR.

The first volume of "Australia in the Great War" is the beginning of an important enterprise which is nothing less than to give "a pictorial and permanent record of the doings of the Australian Imperial Force in billet, furlough, hospital, and on the field of honour." Profits are to be devoted to the Repatriation Fund, and the Minister for Defence contributes to a foreword, which emphasises the aims of this fund, and the obligations of those who for one reason or another have stayed at home. This volume deals with the Australians in England, Flanders, and France, and contains pictures which are always interesting and sometimes wonderfully effective. The photographers have not suffered from "cold feet" in the pursuit of their business, nor have the authorities insisted too much upon the fog of war. Sometimes the letter press to the photographs is vague, but as the foreword discreetly remarks, "for reasons that are well known, this is unavoidable." The photographs are excellent, and, unlike many, contrive to give an idea of the scenes and sights in proper perspective. Also, they make the faces of the members of the A.I.F., who have been "sniped" by the camera very clear. There are many thousands of these faces, and there are many who will buy this book, not only because it is in a good cause, but because they may hope to find in it the face of their own man. (Cassell and Co.)

NEW NOVELS.

In "The Man of the Silver Mount" Mr. Max Pemberton renews his youth of "The Iron Pirate" and the "Impregnable City," and shows that his hand has lost none of its cunning in the description of deeds of derring do. Here is sensation enough for the most exacting. In the first few pages there is item a fire at sea, item a murder, item an attempted murder, item an abduction, yet these are but the prelude to further thrilling experiences which fall to the lot of the hero when he reaches Silver Mount. This is a mysterious and inaccessible island in the Atlantic, the asylum of a turbulent Scottish adventurer, who, after a chequered career in Mexican politics, has levanted with the contents of the treasury and established himself here as the uncrowned monarch of all he surveys. "His Excellency," as he chooses to be called, has a natural antipathy to emissaries of the police; those that reach the island receive a short shrift and a long rope, and the hero, a young engineer with a taste for romance, fails to convince his host that he is not a spy, and only succeeds in keeping a whole skin by his own enterprise, coupled with extraordinary good luck. The position is complicated by the outbreak of war, which brings several German cruisers hot foot to the island with the intention of making it a submarine base; they are pursued by British cruisers, and a confused quadrilateral melee follows, in which Dixon's aptitude for getting into tight corners is equalled by his singular faculty for getting out of them unscathed. The book depends entirely on its action, and Mr. Pemberton hurries us on from incident to incident in such breathless succession that we have no time to reflect upon such prosaic matters as probabilities. (Cassell; Dymock's.)

The climax of "The Great Gift," by Sydney Paternoster, contains a surprise for the protagonist, though not, perhaps, for the reader. Hugo Standish has raised himself literally from the gutter to the high places, and yet when in middle life wealth, influence and position have crowned his efforts he is conscious that something is still lacking. He believes that he knows what it is. All through his career he has been far too busy to indulge in soft passages; yet now he can see how love sweetens the existence of those of lofty and humble degree alike. Standish is a man of action. No sooner does he realise what he wants than he proceeds to get it. He makes the acquaintance of an agreeable young lady, and falls head over heels in love with her. She, mistaking affection and admiration for something deeper, appears to reciprocate his sentiments. For a time all goes well, but youth calls to youth with no uncertain voice, and Standish learns that, though Olive will faithfully keep to her bargain, her heart belongs to another. Thereupon he magnanimously sets her free, and realises after all that the greatest gift may be not in love but in abnegation. (Bodley, Head.)

THRICE HONOURED.

Another decoration—the Military Cross—has just been awarded to Lieutenant Dalton Neville, D.C.M., C. de G., for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He is a son of Mr. T. W. Neville, L.D.S., surgeon dentist, of T. and G. Buildings, Elizabeth-street, and left for the front in 1915, and is only 21 years of age. His father has received General Birdwood's letter of congratulation on the additional distinction as follows:—"Knowing that identifications were urgently wanted, and having located two enemy posts, you decided to attack them; you led your men with such dash and skill that the enemy were caught unprepared, and you succeeded in taking three prisoners and inflicting casualties on the garrison; you displayed excellent leadership in withdrawing your patrol to our lines under very heavy enemy machine-gun fire, and in face of a counter-attack. It reflects the greatest credit on you that action was carried out without a casualty."

SHRIMPS FROM THE SKY.

A recent report stated that a large quantity of shrimps fell near Singleton in a prolonged shower of rain. The Chief Secretary, the Minister controlling the State Fisheries, advises that steps were immediately taken to secure specimens of these shrimps, which have now come to hand, and are pronounced by the ichthyologist at the Australian Museum to be the freshwater shrimp, Xiphocaris compressa. These crustaceans are found in great abundance in fresh water throughout our river systems, and the shrimps which fell with the rain near Singleton were doubtless collected by a waterspout from some shallow inland lagoon or waterhole, and carried in the clouds to Broke, where the phenomenal shower fell. It will be of interest to recall the fact that at the end of 1913 a shower of small fish, identified as Craterocephalus fluviatilis, commonly known as hardyheads, fell in a rainstorm at Quirindi.

REVIEWS OF THE MONTH.

HOLLAND AND THE WAR.

In one of the last of his speeches Baron von Kuhlmann reminded his hearers that the Rhine flowed through German territory into the North Sea, and bade them remember that the expansion of Germany should be directed to the west as well as to the east. He was speaking in defence of the Treaty of Bucharest in the German Chamber of Commerce, but his speech has directed attention to German claims on Holland, and will give great interest to all articles which appear in the magazines for the month of June, one in the "Fortnightly Review" on Holland's inevitable decision, and another in the "Nineteenth Century" on Dutch-German railways. The second article has been very freely quoted in the French Press. It is too detailed to be fully discussed here, and cannot well be studied without a map. It shows how Germany was slowly getting control of Dutch railways before the war; in some cases by linking them up to her own; in others by taking over non-paying lines; in others, again, by obtaining concessions. The writer, Demetrius Boulger, says that the Dutch opinion has been considerably excited by this gradual process, and by the threats which have been lately directed to their Government. The anonymous writer of the "Fortnightly" article, however, suggests that the Dutch Ministry and the Court contain many strong German sympathisers who have not been very careful about their country's independence. He adds to the story of the railways a list of the German outrages committed on Holland, and contrasts them with the consideration shown by the Allies from the very beginning of the war. The Allies have many friends in Holland, in the Government, in Parliament, and in non-official life, who see the present danger to their country, but this writer thinks it necessary to appeal to them to assert themselves now lest Holland shall lose her old position in the councils of Europe and all the associations of her history.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF INDIA.

Lord Sydenham's warning that the present proposals of the Government take no account of the working people of India gives point to an article by Mrs. Haigh in the "Nineteenth Century" called "A Constructive Policy for India." She deals exclusively with economic development, and particularly with the development of agriculture. She finds the alternative to political agitation in the improvement of Indian agriculture on the model of the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, more familiarly known as the I.A.O.S. The analogy is not particularly comforting at the present time if we consider the present state of politics in Ireland; but Mrs. Haigh certainly shows what an amazing work Sir Horace Plunkett and his friends have done since they started their co-operative creameries in 1889. There is a foundation to build on in India in a great number of societies founded on the model inaugurated by Raiffeisen, but it has never been sufficiently considered by the Government. "It is not enough that a discussion of the theory of co-operation may at rare intervals disturb the confirmed habit of personal and historical surveys, followed at times by a practical paper, say, on the rearing of silkworms in the north-west corner of the Punjaub. We must begin at the beginning; agriculture comes before banking and a long way before international banking. The tiller of the soil takes precedence of the dealer in international bills of exchange. Practical Indian economists will know where to take their political allegiance if they must subscribe to a party programme, and, as for the ineffective agitator, who relies on words instead of action, he will have to prepare himself for a rapid psychological adjustment of his outlook, or the elimination of his personality in a world of affairs."

Another paper on India is called "India's Man Power," and appears in the "Contemporary Review." It is a protest against the insufficient use of Indian troops and of Indian labourers, which reads rather oddly in face of Mr. Montague's comments on their services in tropical expeditions. The writer thinks that the Indian army has been both mismanaged and ignored, and his figures certainly show a great willingness to fight for the Empire on the part of all sections of the people and a superabundance of man-power still left unused.

THE POST-WAR SETTLEMENT.

There are two articles in the "Contemporary" dealing with the future of Austria and Italy, and their relations with the races now subject to the Austrian Empire. In the first the writer traces the process by which the hostility existing between Italy and the Slav races has gradually been eliminated till now we find Slav regiments fighting on the Italian front. The writer calls himself an old Mazzinian. He is uncertain whether the new friendship is appreciated by all the members of the Italian Government. He thinks that many of them are still prepared to insist that Italy shall have the best ports on the Adriatic. Some of these claims are founded in the history of the Italian republics, and will be hard to renounce, but the writer thinks it essential that they should be, if the attacks of Austria from without are to be completed by her disruption from within.

The next paper by Mr. Herbert Vivian, a well-known authority, deals with the future of Roumania. It is naturally not very cheerful, and not dogmatic. The writer thinks that the future of Roumania is safe, because of her vast agricultural and mineral resources, but he is by no means certain whether Roumania, after her great deception, will ever come back to friendship with the Allies, or whether the peasants will not at last assert themselves and get rid of the old governing oligarchy. Mr. Vivian does not tell us how, unless Roumania is to come back, she will ever be able to use her resources for her own benefit, for at present they are entirely mortgaged to Germany, and will remain so if even the most moderate of German statesmen, Baron von Kuhlman, is right in his interpretation of the Treaty of Bucharest.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Before the war quarterly magazines were beginning to lose their value owing to the abundance of books containing quickly written but thorough studies of the subjects treated by them. Restrictions on imports which cut down the supply of new books have given them a new opportunity. The opportunity is admirably suited to "The Round Table" method of tracing the causes of conspicuous current events in foreign or domestic politics. In the June number this method is applied to a number of subjects which affect the cause of the war and the future of the British Empire. An article on Russia, Germany, and Asia is an illuminating exposition of a problem of which very little is known, and which may affect the future lives of all of us. It shows how loose was the tie which united the provinces of Asiatic Russia to Petrograd; how many jealousies subsist between one province and another, and how easy it will be for Turkey or Germany to play one off against the other. The article is a warning, supported by original authorities, of the danger to which either India or China may be exposed through the substitution of a path to Siberia for the Bagdad railway. The next article, obviously written by an expert authority, describes the conditions under which Mr. Montagu made his visit to India, and which led up to the recent proposals for reform in Indian government. The writer, who is both sympathetic and critical, is clearly of opinion that as in Ireland so in India economic reforms will not kill a political agitation. His conclusions are based on a knowledge of facts at a first hand which are nowhere else so conveniently collected, and which are indispensable to an understanding of our own prospects. The recent manifestations of the Prussian spirit, their results, and their answer are treated in four articles, which, though less historical, are equally illuminating. The writers agree that at the beginning of the year there was in all the Allied countries a spirit of distrust of the respective Governments and of doubt about the issues of the war. They argue also that doubt and distrust have been almost entirely swept away by the treaties with Russia and Roumania. The offensive destroyed illusions about the weakness of our adversary or about his conciliatory spirit, but it showed us our choice between bracing ourselves for new sacrifices or surrendering our independence and our reputation. The number concludes with a most interesting article by the New Zealand contributor on "German Colonies in the Pacific," meaning thereby Samoa.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

The parents of the late Lieutenant Derek Hudson, a baritone who became very popular here in the principal role in "Gipsy Love," and in various other comic opera characters, have forwarded to his widow a letter describing his death. Mrs. Hudson is still appearing with the J. C. Williamson Musical Comedy Company under the stage-name of Eileen Dawn. This letter may be quoted as likely to comfort those amongst us who have near relatives prisoners in Germany. It affords an instance of kindly conduct on the part of a German chaplain deserving of recognition. Chaplain Fred. Flad is this good man's name and title. He writes at considerable length from "Paderburn," under date April 27, beginning: "These last days I have visited as clergyman your son, Lieutenant Hudson, of the Flying Corps, who was brought here very seriously wounded. Alas, it was not possible to human care to save his life. He succumbed to his wounds yesterday afternoon at 4.30. His English comrades, who shared with him the same room, told me that he passed away very quietly, having been asleep since 12 o'clock. The doctor told me his death was due to blood poisoning, which had come on through very serious burns contracted when his machine came down all in flames. . . I can assure you that he received all necessary care from the doctors and the sisters of St. Vincent de Paul, into whose hospital he was brought, and was continuously surrounded by English fellow-officers lying in the same hospital. He bore his sufferings bravely. I saw Lieutenant Hudson several times, and had a short talk and prayer with him. At the request of Lieutenant Hudson himself the German military chaplain gave him the Holy Communion a few days before my return home. To-morrow, Tuesday, April 30, the burial will take place in the graveyard of Paderburn. Your son's body will rest at the side of other comrades of his. I shall myself conduct the ceremony. May God strengthen you to bear this great sorrow. If the thought that warm sympathy surrounded your son during his last days will help you, I like to assure you that such was given him fully. My wife, too, was allowed to see him once, and sit at his side. With kind regards, yours truly, Fred. Flad." By a later mail Mrs. Hudson received from the same German centre a letter of condolence from Lieutenant Ward, Australian Flying Corps, the address of whose family on this side she would be pleased to know. Mr. Ward has safely in his possession the gold watch presented by the Royal Comic Opera Company to Mr. Hudson before he enlisted.

The Royal Philharmonic Society of Sydney, which was to have performed "The Dream of Gerontius" on September 26, has recently withdrawn that work from rehearsal in favour of "The Redemption." The subscribers will probably receive the news without feelings of disappointment when they learn the reason for the change. It seems that, owing to the prolonged success of the Philharmonic popular concerts from early in February to April 20, followed in due course by "The Creation" and the miscellaneous concert, it was realised by the conductor that he could not present "Gerontius" to his satisfaction. Mr Joseph Bradley discovered that Elgar's modern idiom considerably troubled the orchestra, which includes a proportion of amateur players, and the choral portion is also unusually difficult. The fact that the centenary of the birth of Charles Gounod (June 17, 1818) was being celebrated in London and Paris then suggested a revival of "The Redemption," originally produced at the Birmingham Festival of 1882, and in Paris not until 1884. Mr. Bradley conducted it for the Glasgow Choral Union in the early 'Nineties with a star cast, consisting of Madame Albani, Miss Orridge, Edward Lloyd, and Charles Santley. The work includes several numbers which have become permanently famous. On the choral side there are "Unfold Ye Portals" with passages for trumpets and harps, and the attractive "Lovely Appear." The principal soprano solo, "From Thy Love as a Father," is a standing classic, and there is the touching contralto aria (with chorus) "While My Watch I am Keeping." A fine piece of instrumental music occurs in the prologue, descriptive of the world in darkness, the art scheme here embracing the fall of our first parents and the promise of a Redeemer. Gounod's work reached Sydney with a speed which forms a tribute to the enterprise of that period. Mr. Joseph Massey conducted it in its entirety, with full chorus and a limited orchestra, at the Protestant Hall in September, 1885. The soloists were Mrs. H. Colley, mother of Ada Colley, who made a name here and in England for the phenomenal high range of her light soprano voice; Mr. Thompson Brown (tenor), and Mr. F. J. Hallewell (bass).

The writer of "A Woman's Letter," leaving the round of the regular London theatres, forwards an account of Congreve's "The Way of the World," as produced by the Stage Society:—"This old play has great merits of dialogue and wit. But, like all Restoration plays of the kind, it lacks movement. Still Congreve was the direct ancestor of all our epigrammatic playwrights. From Congreve came Sheridan, from Sheridan you pass to Pinero and Oscar Wilde. The fearless handling of marital infidelity and the relations of the sexes was more or less constantly their text. It was put on by the Stage Society in Restoration style. That is to say, the curtain never fell through the course of the five acts of the comedy. The necessary changes of scene were made in coram populi. Servants substituted one set of furniture for another. Where the scene in the Mall took place, however, two screens painted with trees and a pathway represented The Mall as it was in Congreve's days. Miss Edyth Goodall played Millamount, the chief character of the women. Miss Ethel Irving was for some time considered the only possible Millamount. I believe she was exceedingly clever in the role. Whether she had distinction enough I cannot say. I did not see her. I would have thought Miss Ellis Jeffreys nearer the style of artist. Miss Goodall, however, made her a very delightful figure, and was perhaps a trifle too restless for so great a dame. The men were not like it at all; and, indeed, the critics agree that feminine nature has changed less since the Restoration than have the men."

The Tivoli Theatres have purchased the Australian rights of "Snice," a revue which enjoyed a big vogue in London. The principal parts in the new frolic will be played by Eve Kelland and Harry de Roebeck. The former, a comedienne, well known in English theatrical circles, originated her role in "Snice," when it was staged in London and at the Cape. Others engaged for "Snice" are Fayette Perry, Leslie Gaze, Harry Burns, Charlie Albert, Elsie Parkes, and Espinosa, who also directed "Snice" in both England and South Africa. "Snice" will have its premiere at the Sydney Tivoli.

The "Dick Whittington" company arrived in Sydney at noon on Wednesday, and in less than three hours were smartly got away by special train for Brisbane to the number of over 100 people—with all impediments. The J. C. Williamson pantomime was staged in the Queensland capital last night. With the same readiness of despatch, the Kathlene Macdonell party appeared at Geelong Tuesday night, reached Sydney at 10.40 Thursday, and a few hours later embarked on the Makura for Wellington.

Sir George Alexander's will has been proved in London at £90,672. Several gifts from royal personages are left to his wife, who has for life his portrait by Sir Luke Fildes, R.A., one in "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Robert Brough, and his bust by Onslow Ford, R.A. After her death these art treasures will go to the Garrick Club, the Green Room Club, and the Beefsteak Club respectively. He left numerous bequests to the staff of St. James's Theatre and to his servants, and £1000 each to Lilian Braithwaite (actress) and Lady Cicely Baillie-Hamilton. His wife received £5000 and one half the residue of his estate for life. On her death one-fourth to the Actors' Benevolent Fund, one-fourth to the Actors' Orphanage, one-fourth to King Edward's Hospital Fund, and one-fourth to the Vicar of Chorley Wood, Herts, for the poor of the parish.

FOR MOSQUITO BITES, WASP OR BEE STINGS, nothing allays the irritation so quickly as SCRUBBS AMMONIA. Sold by all Grocers and Chemists. Avoid injurious imitations. Price 1/3 PER BOTTLE.—ADVT.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Continued.

"I'm sorry. I never thought I could be such a fool," she said bitterly. "And it's poor father who will suffer—and, perhaps, you, too."

"I don't think you need worry about me, Dorothy—"

"He'll believe you induced me to cut him—cousinly advice, you know."

"Let him believe it! As for your father, I don't wish to become a nuisance on the one subject, but I do wish you would help me, once and for all, to lift him out of reach of those blackguards." A pause. "Dorothy, will you marry me?"

"Oh, dear!" she sighed, "how can you be so impulsive?"—and opened the door.

Two hours after this the postman brought a letter, which she carried off to her bedroom. From the old clerk, Arnold, it urged her to bring her father home. The walls were tottering, the entire fabric was crumbling, and he feared he could hold the fort no longer. At least that was what the three pages of the piteous epistle amounted to.

She felt more helpless than ever. After a while she went down to the sitting-room. Mr. Silverest was dozing before the fire. Such an old, frail man he had become! Not possible that he could survive the humiliation which drew nearer with every day, every hour.

With her heart breaking, Dorothy stole back to her room. Her pride was beaten. She could not see her father crushed. . . . Perhaps, after all, David did care for her in his light, impulsive way. Perhaps, some day, he might come to care for her in strong, lasting fashion. And perhaps, some day, she might find that she really cared, too. Ah, well, it was all "perhaps!" Nevertheless, the venture must be made.

She got pen and paper, and, while her colour came and went—she wrote:—

"David, I will marry you.—Dorothy."

Having enclosed and directed this, she entrusted it to her landlady's little girl, with instructions not to ask for an answer.

The weather seemed milder, and she took her father for a short walk, returning for a cup of tea. Then she read to him almost continuously until supper time, and afterwards played cards until his early bedtime. Throughout those hours she maintained a cheerful exterior. Her finer sense seemed to be numbed. Only now and then was she conscious of waiting for David's appearance.

But David did not appear.

* * * * *

Her father had gone upstairs, and she was idling with a book, when the bell rang, and presently the landlady, looking none too pleased, ushered in a young man, a stranger.

"I beg to apologise, Miss Silverest," he began, and waited for the closing of the door. "I am Roddie Boon, a friend of Mr. Starforth's," he resumed in a lowered voice. "Perhaps he has mentioned me."

Dorothy advanced, holding out her hand. "Won't you sit down?" she said.

When she had seated herself, he continued—

"I've just arrived in St. Ann's. Train greatly delayed about the borders, and wires down for miles. On arrival I went straight to the cottage where my friend Starforth is staying. They told me he had gone out shortly after 3 o'clock, and had not since returned. They suggested my calling here, and I did so just to leave word of my arrival, seeing that the wire bidding him expect me had not come through." Boon halted for an instant. "But when your landlady told me he was out here I thought I might venture to ask you. Why, what's wrong, Miss Silverest?" He rose in alarm.

Dorothy had risen first. She stood wavering, a hand gripping the mantel. She was white.

"You are a friend of Mr. Phin's, aren't you?" she demanded.

"Close friend."

"Then I can tell you what I fear is wrong."

"You can trust me, Miss Silverest. I know something about David's affairs, too."

The door opened. The landlady called in a terrified voice—

"Miss Silverest, will you go up at once? Your father is ill."

"I'm here, if you want me," said Roddie Boon, as she ran out.

CHAPTER XIX.

A VICTORY FOR GLADE.

Shaken by furious emotions Glade emerged from the station. The conveyance he had ordered by wire the previous evening—the only cab in St. Ann's—was, of course, not there. He would have to walk to the Castle House. The distance was under two miles, and his suit-case was light, but somehow he shrank from making a passage through the streets of the little place. However, there was nothing else for it, and he set out at a brisk pace. The weather was not so bitter here as it had been at the junction, yet the exercise failed to remove the chill that seemed to have penetrated to his very marrow. Nor was he comforted by the thought of arriving at the house, wherein neither fire nor food would be waiting for him, for in all probability Mandrake's telegram had also been delayed.

And save for an odd fleeting thought of this sort, and an occasional inclination to glance behind him, there was no room in his mind for anything but that moment's episode on the platform. In all his life he had never been so filled with resentment, and if during the walk it subsided from the seething to the sullen state, the change boded no weakening of the resolve for revenge. Nothing engineered by Godfrey Mandrake could have assured the allegiance of his junior partner as that chance meeting, so simply brought about by the weather and an old man's desire for a newspaper, had done. In an instant Starforth, hitherto a scarcely realised menace to Glade, had become his personal and violently-hated enemy.

He came at last to the gate, and after a dreary wait was admitted, none too eagerly, by the man Dwight. Mrs. Dwight, however, having read a short note which Glade at once delivered, bestirred herself to provide what hospitality the house afforded. There was, at all events, plenty in the cellar, and Glade was soon seated at a wood fire comforting himself with whisky hot, while a bottle of vintage Burgundy stood uncorked on the hearth, to "take the chill off" before lunch.

Of the commissions entrusted to him by Mandrake, the most important were to discover everything possible concerning David Starforth's doings at St. Ann's; to reassure the frightened housekeeper; to obtain, personally, some idea of the prisoner's health; and to bring back certain papers from a safe in Mandrake's sitting-room. He was also to keep his eyes open to the condition of affairs in the house generally.

The woman was clearing the table when he said:—

"I'm afraid you have not yet got over your scare, Mrs. Dwight, but I have come specially to tell you, from Mr. Mandrake, that there is no real cause for alarm. He has the whole matter well in hand. This fellow Starforth, or Bethune——"

"Ah!" she cried, "so I wasn't mistaken! Almighty, what shall I do?"

"Calm yourself. After all, he's only the son——"

"He means mischief—coming about the shore every other day; watching the house——"

"He can do nothing that will affect your safety," Glade said with an assurance he did not feel.

She set the tray down and stared at him. "It was all before your time, sir. How much do you know about it?"

"Everything."

"There was no good in telling you," she muttered. Then aloud—"Mr. Mandrake says 'no cause for alarm,' and I suppose he means 'no danger.' Can he—or you—prove that to me?"

Glade answered sharply: "You must take his word, and mine."

She shook her head. "I wish I could, sir." Suddenly, she asked: "Did Mr. Mandrake send a paper for me?"

"What sort of paper?"

"A paper with my name to it."

"No, Mrs. Dwight. I gave you his note; all I had for you."

She heaved a sigh. "I'm sorry to say it, but Mr. Mandrake isn't doing the fair thing by me, Mr. Glade."

"Indeed!"

"For years he's been promising to give me back that paper. I asked for it again, when I wrote about—oh, I can't speak the name."

"Can't you tell me what the paper was about, Mrs. Dwight?" he inquired, with something of his old suavity.

She frowned. "I thought you said you knew everything," she returned suspiciously. "Well, you can ask Mr. Mandrake, and tell him I must have it back at once. If not—"

"Come, come! Mr. Mandrake is very much occupied at present. Still, I'll give him your message. Now tell me about your encounter with Starforth—I'll spare your feelings by calling him that."

In the end he persuaded her, and she took him out of doors, and showed him the place at which, on hearing the explosion, she had looked over the sea-wall.

"This stone is loose," he remarked, laying his hand on the rough coping. The stone, a small one compared with its neighbours, wobbled under slight force.

"It's Dwight's affair, only he'll attend to nought but the gardens."

WOMEN'S COLUMN.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

The shop which is under the direction of the Edith Cavell Memorial Association will be open on Tuesday next as usual at 305 George-street, when Miss B. A. King will be in charge. A good assortment of flowers, vegetables, jams, home-made cakes, etc., will be on sale. Orders for prime poultry will be taken. Those desiring to leave orders may do so by telephoning Miss B. A. King at Drummoyne 9 on either Saturday or Monday evenings. The executive meeting was held on Tuesday, August 6, when Mrs. Shaw occupied the chair. It was announced that the Australasian Trained Nurses' Association at its annual meeting had voted the sum of £100 to the Edith Cavell Fund. Arrangements are to be immediately put in hand for a fete to be held in a couple of months' time, at the residence of Dr. Cecil Purser, Rostrevor, Wahroonga, at which it is hoped a large sum may be realised for the endowment fund.

Tucked away in the Cadia Mountains (says "Ella"), in the Carcoar district, is a little school attended by only 14 children, who represent six families, and during recent times these 14 children have been responsible for the following cash contributions to patriotic funds:—Red Cross Fund, £10/10/; War Savings Certificates to the beginning of the month, £24/10/; Soldiers' Insurance Fund (incomplete), nearly £10. Besides these, each child contributes weekly to a fund for purchasing wool, which is in turn converted into comforts for soldiers. The scholars are now busy getting together materials for soldiers' Christmas boxes. It would be interesting to know how many people subscribe so liberally per head. Surely these little ones are like the flower that's "born to blush unseen," though there is certainly no "waste of fragrance."

Mrs. Harris, care Hugh Duff and Co., 283 George-street, forwards an extract from a letter dated February 12 from the hon. secretary, Glove Waistcoat Society, London:—"We write to thank you for your continued assistance in the collection throughout Australia of old kid gloves for airmen's vests. Over 35,000 windproof waistcoats have now been made here out of otherwise waste material so generously supplied." Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. kindly receive parcels daily.

At the Town Hall on Thursday a concert will be given in aid of the Hospice for the Dying. Mrs. Leahy and Mrs. Wm. Macleod are the hon. secretaries, and Mrs. Tooney and Mrs. W. J. Adams the hon. treasurers.

At the Methodist Church, Wagga Wagga, on July 10, Elsie Victoria, second daughter of Mrs. King and the late Mr. Charles Henry King, of Wagga Wagga, was married to the Rev. Herbert Wheen Woodhouse, Methodist minister at Glen Innes, elder son of the Rev. Joseph Woodhouse, of Waverley. The Rev. Henry Pennington officiated. Miss Bessie Heydon was bridesmaid, and the Rev. Harold S. Doust, of The Rock, acted as best man. The church was decorated for the occasion, and the choir assisted in the musical service. The bride, who was given away by Mr. Thomas H. Brunskill, brother-in-law, wore a dress of ivory crepe de Chine, with bodice of Georgette and touches of heliotrope, and the customary wreath and veil trimmed with pearls. The bridesmaid wore champagne crepe de Chine, with hat to match. The breakfast was served at the residence of the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Woodhouse left the same evening for Sydney, the bride's travelling costume being black valvet, with black fox furs and purple hat.

The marriage of Vera J., the second daughter of Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. I. Chaseling, of Strathfield, with Mr. Howard R. M. S. Renwick, M.P.S., fourth son of the late Sir Arthur and Lady Renwick, was celebrated on Saturday, June 29, at Albert-road, Strathfield, by the Rev. G. H. Hewitt. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Lieut. M. Chaseling, wore a gown of crepe de Chine and Georgette, and carried a bouquet of white hyacinths and sweet peas. Miss Sylvia Chaseling, as bridesmaid, wore pale pink charmeuse, with an overdress of cream net. Her gift from the bridegroom was a gold wristlet watch and a bouquet carried out in autumn shades. Sergt. A. W. Gray, of the Field Artillery, acted as best man. After the ceremony a quiet reception was held at the residence. Later Mr. and Mrs. Renwick left for Katoomba and Jenolan Caves, the bride travelling in a grey costume.

A lecture of great interest to women who are housewives will be given by Mr. Arthur Kench, chief inspector under the Pure Food Act, on "Pure Food for the People." This will form the sixth lecture of the winter course arranged by the Health Society in the Assembly Hall, Education-building, Bridge-street, on Monday, at 5.30 p.m. Special invitations to bring friends are extended to members.

Girls to the number of 250 thronged the Castlereagh-street Y.W.C.A. Hall on Tuesday on the occasion of a "conference echoes" banquet, which was also made a welcome gathering in honour of the 200 new members who have linked themselves with the association during the past three months. Beautifully decorated with pink boronia and wattle, the hall presented a bright scene as the guests seated themselves at the tables. Mrs. C. T. Newman (acting president, Sydney Association), Mrs. A. S. Neill, Miss Fowler, Miss Bignell (acting general secretary), and others sat at a table on the platform, and at the close of the feast Mrs. Newman extended a warm welcome to the new members, which was cordially endorsed by Miss Bignell, who read the long list of names of these newly joined. An original "Welcome Song" was very heartily sung to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning." "Echoes" of the Y.W.C.A. conference, held at Blackheath from June 21 to 26 last, which followed, proved highly interesting. Miss Fowler, as chairman, called first upon Mrs. Neill (conference hostess), who expressed her great appreciation of the privileges and opportunities afforded by the conference. Miss Bignell showed that 91 had registered, of varying church denominations, and representing a variety of callings. The Bible study circles, mission study, "Vespers," and the evening meetings conducted by Mr. Gillanders and Rev. J. R. Blanchard were touched upon by the speakers, who described every bit of conference as "beautiful." A sympathetic laugh went round when one girl advised the others, "If you have the chance to go to a Y.W.C.A. conference, just rush it." Applause was continuous, and the guests spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

The Comforts Fund Committee of the Australian Mechanical Transport Service, with headquarters at the Dunlop Rubber Company building, Wentworth-avenue, Sydney, is at present busily engaged in completing a shipment of comforts and Christmas cheer. This committee during the earlier stages of the war worked for the comfort of the Divisional Ammunition Park, a picked unit of some 600 men which left Australia in 1914, and being attached to the Imperial Army saw service in France before the Gallipoli campaign. On the arrival in France of the Australian divisions the D.A.P. and D.S.C. were detached from the imperial forces, and have since, with constant reinforcements, become part of the A.I.F. in France. At the present time the strength of the unit is understood to be about 3000, and the comforts committee has therefore a tolerably big task on hand in providing for such a contingent. Nevertheless, the energetic ladies who form the committee are working with a will, and are hopeful of eclipsing all previous records. Relations and friends of all motor men on active service with the A.I.F. are cordially invited to assist, and donations, as well as gifts of suitable comforts, will be welcomed at the committee-room, Dunlop's-building, Wentworth-avenue. Socks are badly needed, and prizes are being arranged for a competition.

At St. Andrew's Cathedral on July 27 the Dean of Sydney officiated at the marriage of Ella Mary, youngest daughter of the late Mr. E. J. Buchan, of Grafton, and Mrs. Buchan, Artarmon, with Lieutenant George Arthur Whitton, R.N.R. (on furlough), eldest son of Captain and Mrs. F. W. Whitton, of Annandale. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Frank Buchan, was attended by Miss Jean Whitton, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Jessie Teape, cousin of the bride. Mr. R. G. Morgan (late A.I.F.) acted as best man, and Mr. H. Bridgen as groomsman. The reception was held at Sargent's. Lieutenant and Mrs. Whitton afterwards leaving for the South Coast.

The George Campbell Memorial Church, Roseville, was the scene of a wedding on June 8, when William Carey, only son of the Rev. William Page, of Adelaide, was married to Erica, elder daughter of Mrs. Noble, Bayswater-road, Roseville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Robertson, M.A., assisted by the bridegroom's father. The church was decorated. The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore a cream gabardine coat and skirt, with cream panne velvet hat. Her boquet of white carnations was the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Gertie Grigg, of Brisbane, cousin of the bride, attended as bridesmaid, and wore a nattier blue costume with cream velour hat. H. Grigg acted as best man. A reception, followed by afternoon tea, was held at Kyarra, the residence of the bride's mother. Later the happy couple left for Wentworth Falls, the bride travelling in a coat and skirt of navy serge, with touches of tan, and a black velour hat.

A plain and fancy dress masked ball and euchre party will be held at Leigh House, Castlereagh-street, on Wednesday, September 18, in aid of soldiers' homes at Matraville. The V.W.A. are organisers.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT OF AUSTRALIA.

(Before Justices Isaacs, Gavan Duffy, and Rich.)

QUESTION OF INCOME-TAX.

Nathan v Commissioner of Taxation.

Hearing was entered upon of a special case stated under Section 38, sub-section 3 of the Commonwealth Income Tax Assessment Act, 1915, by Mr. Justice Pring, as the outcome of an appeal to the State Supreme Court by Albert Henry Nathan against the assessment of his income for purposes of income tax by the Commonwealth Income Tax Commissioner.

Appellant, it was admitted at the appeal, is a shareholder in S. Hoffnung and Co., Ltd., the Bank of Australasia, and Farmer and Co., Ltd., and is resident in New South Wales. The companies mentioned are incorporated under English law, their registered offices and central management being in England, outside the Commonwealth; but they carry on business and make profits in Australia, as well as in England and elsewhere outside the Commonwealth. The appellant was paid in England during the financial year ending June 30, 1915, dividends from the companies mentioned, and the Commissioner included in the assessment of the appellant for income tax for the financial year 1915-16, sums, aggregating £6280, received as dividends, claiming that that was the proportion of the dividends attributable to the profits derived by the companies from their businesses in Australia. The appellant claimed that such sums were not part of his taxable income, but if included the taxable amount was only £2977. The State Supreme Court, therefore, stated a case for the High Court as to whether such sums were rightly or wrongly included in such assessment. Plaintiff set up that the dividends having been declared and paid in England, should not be included, inasmuch as the income was derived from a source outside Australia. The Commissioner for Taxation answered that the amount assessed was only the fraction of the total dividends that was applicable to the profits made in Australia.

Mr. Campbell, K.C., with him Mr. Weston, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared for the appellant; Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., with him Mr. T. R. Bavin, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, appeared for the respondent.

The matter is part heard.

COMMONWEALTH ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Higgins, President.)

THE SHIPBUILDING AGREEMENT.

The Amalgamated Society of Engineers, on an application for interpretation, challenged what it alleged was, under the agreement with the Prime Minister in connection with shipbuilding, an endeavour to impose piecework, the dilution of skilled labour, and a guarantee that operations should be continuous. The society therefore asked for an order restraining the Commonwealth from doing the things mentioned either by individual or collective agreements with employees.

His Honor directed that evidence be submitted on Monday.

Mr. Hampson, organising secretary for Victoria and Tasmania for the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, appeared for the applicants; Mr. Shepherd appeared for the Commonwealth.

SUPREME COURT.

IN EQUITY.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

This was an application by Frank Arthur Thurecht, the plaintiff, and by the defendant, William James Donnegan, for the continuation of an injunction restraining, till the hearing of the suit, the defendant, Charles Willing, from selling, alienating, charging, or disposing of properties at North Sydney known as Evandale, Ngarui, and Tauranga, and from exercising his powers as mortgagee. An order was also asked directing the defendant Willing to deliver up possession of the properties to the plaintiff, and for the appointment of a receiver. Mr. D. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Saywell and Saywell, appeared for the applicants; and Mr. Collins, instructed by O. F. Alexander, for Willing.

His Honor made an order appointing the plaintiff receiver of the rents of the properties till the hearing. He also granted an injunction restraining Willing from exercising his power as mortgagee without leave of the Court. A direction was given that the hearing should be expedited.

A TURRAMURRA BOARDING-HOUSE.

Haddy v Paul.

On June 4 last the plaintiff Philomena Gertrude Haddy, who keeps a residential boarding-house at Hill View, Turramura, obtained an injunction restraining the defendant, Edmund Sheffield Willoughby Paul, from taking action under the powers of a bill of sale held by him over the chattels at Hill View, as security for repayment of certain advances made by him to the plaintiff. The subject matter of the dispute between the parties was that the defendant had claimed that default had been made by the plaintiff's non-payment of an instalment, due under the bill of sale, on December 30 last. The defendant thereupon claimed that he was entitled to take possession of the chattels comprised in his security. The plaintiff contended that, though she had not paid the instalment on its due date, she was not really in default, inasmuch as a clause in her agreement with the defendant gave her latitude if she could set up that adverse circumstances, for which she was not responsible, had arisen to prevent prompt payment. She alleged that such conditions had arisen, and that on a later date she had tendered the amount due as an instalment, and that defendant had refused to accept it.

The defendant now demurred on the ground of the plaintiff's admissions of default on the due date, and also that she had not since paid the £250, and that the proviso to clause 5 of the third agreement between the parties, regarding the postponement of the dates for payment of instalments, did not entitle the plaintiff to defer the payment of the first instalment.

Mr. Maughan and Mr. Bonney, instructed by Mr. F. Lynn Rolin, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. Clive Teece for the defendant. The case is part heard.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Judge Curlewis.)

MODE OF APPEAL.

His Honor delivered his reserved judgment in a case, Leonard v Yallaroi Shire Council—an appeal from the Court of Petty Sessions at Warialda. The proceedings in the Court below were brought for wages alleged to be due under the terms of an award, claim being made under sub-section 3 of section 49 of the Industrial Arbitration Act, and the police magistrate dismissed the claim with is costs. The sub-section merely said, his Honor remarked, that either party may appeal "as prescribed," saying nothing about the form the appeal must take, and the question to be determined was the nature of the appeal given by the sub-section. Both sides agreed that section 55 did not touch the question. After discussing the law on the subject his Honor said his opinion was that it was necessary to show that the Court of first instance came to a wrong conclusion on the material before it, and therefore, this appeal could not be heard until the Court knew what material was before the Court of first instance. He refrained from pronouncing final judgment on the case, as he promised the parties to hear argument as to whether the party against whom he decided this preliminary point should not be allowed an opportunity to place before the Court such material as he might deem advisable.

It was decided after argument that appellant should be allowed to bring before the Court the material on which the magistrate based his decision, and his counsel gave an undertaking to pay the assessed costs of the further appeal if the Court thought he should do so.

Mr. Mocatta, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson and Co. (for Messrs. Peate and Murray, of Warialda), appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Ferguson, instructed by Messrs. Shaw and M'Donald (for Mr. Stuart S. Dight, of Warialda), for the respondent council.

Don't Suffer with Chilblains

You suffer? Why? Cold weather; bad circulation. Have chilblains every Winter; can't banish them, only endure them. This reasoning is foolish.

Rexona will drive away your Chilblains. Many who have suffered for years, and endured agony every Winter with resignation, avoiding the good cheer of the fireside, nursing their cracked and bleeding hands in the coldest quarter of the room, now thank Rexona for Winter comfort.

Rexona represents skin health, whether of feet, hands, scalp, or body. A few minutes spent at night anointing the feet with this cool salve means foot comfort all next day. Rubbed gently into the skin of poor suffering hands, a pair of soft, loose gloves to protect them, the unsightly chilblains must vanish. The hands neither hurt nor cause you to blush by their appearance.

Winter work and Winter sports may then be indulged in without fear of resulting agony, for this should be the healthiest time of the year, when we are storing up strength and energy for the coming Summer.

Rexona Brings Relief.

"My little girl, Ruby, had her feet and hands covered with Chilblains for weeks. There were big blisters all over her feet. The poor child used to cry for hours with the pain. She could not put her boots on," writes Mrs. Jane Reiffel, 85 Humphrey-street, Ballarat E., Vic. "I tried all sorts of ointments to make them heal, but they seemed to be getting worse. One day I was recommended to try Rexona on them. I got a tin, and put a little on her hands and feet, and Ruby said: 'Oh! Mum, that is nice; it takes all the pain and burning feeling away.' After five applications the chilblains simply died away, and now she can wear her boots. The poor little girl is so pleased to be cured.

"No one knows what chilblains are till they get them; they are worse than burns. Now I have found a cure, and shall always keep a tin of Rexona in the house, for it is a splendid remedy."

Those Who Have Used Rexona Know Its Value.

My husband suffered greatly from chilblains for two years writes Mrs. Maus, Harvey-street, Richmond, Victoria. They were very painful and he could not sleep. He tried Rexona, and was relieved at once, and in a week's time the chilblains had completely disappeared.

Rexona, the Rapid Healing Ointment, in its unique triangular pot, is so familiar to the average household that it need not be described. Its cool pale green colour is significant of the pure herbs, juices, and extracts of which it is composed, and its antiseptic properties make Rexona the truly rapid healing ointment for chilblains, chapped hands, eczema, bad legs, sores, and wounds of all kinds. Athletes find Rexona invaluable as a rub-down or embrocation, and sufferers from rheumatism get great relief by massaging with Rexona. Take a pot of Rexona home to-night.

EXPERTS will not use any other STEEL SPLIT PULLEY but the "KEYSTONE," yet it does not take an expert to discern the overwhelming advantages and superiority of the "KEYSTONE" over all others. No beaded rim, but a solid thick steel one, with arms placed at the rim partings, giving the pulley wonderful strength and rigidity. Furthermore, it costs no more than others, so why not decide for "KEYSTONE" in future?
We are specialists in all Engineers' requirements, and all orders receive expert and prompt attention. Our stock comprises:—

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The prices shown above and on the stock-sheets are merely estimates of present-day value, and are given in order that tenderers may have some approximate guide to the total value of the stock on such a basis, as well as to variations in quality and the relative values of the various makes. They are not in any way meant to influence intending purchasers, who are entirely free to express their own opinion of value in their tenders.

Tenderers may tender for—
(a) The whole stock.
(b) One or more groups.
(c) One or more lots.
(d) Portions of lots.
The aggregate amount of any tender for lots or portions of lots must not be less than £100.
The special and careful attention of tenderers is invited to Condition No. 2 of the Conditions of Tender, setting forth the proper form in which tenders will be received in all the above cases.
The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted, and where a tender, which is not for the whole stock, is for more than one group or lot or portion of a lot, the right is reserved to accept the tender for all or some or one only of the groups, lots, or portions of lots tendered for, and tenderers for lots undertake to accept either the whole or any portion of such lot or lots.
No tender will be entertained except on tender form provided, or unless in strict compliance with terms and conditions of same.
Deposit of 10 per cent. of amount of tender must accompany tender.
Goods of enemy origin (Wulfing Manufacture) are marked as such in stock-sheets, but the fact of such goods bearing an enemy trade mark will not debar any wholesale purchaser from selling again to a retailer.
TERMS OF PAYMENT.—Cash on removal of goods within fourteen days of receipt of notice of acceptance of tender.
Stock-sheets, containing particulars of the abovementioned lots, and full sample sets, may be inspected, and tender forms and all information may be obtained at the offices of:—

TO ENSURE AMPLE TIME FOR INSPECTION, IN VIEW OF THE LARGE NUMBER OF TENDERS EXPECTED, IT IS REQUESTED THAT APPOINTMENTS FOR INSPECTION SHOULD BE ARRANGED AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE.

A unique opportunity is here presented of replenishing depleted stocks of woollens and trimmings by purchase of these high-grade goods, much of which was imported soon after the outbreak of war, and the like of which it will be practically impossible to import until probably long after the termination of the war.

ON THE LAND.

"GOANAS."

(BY B.C.D.)

They are known as "goanas" the wide bush over, but the "refined" call them iguanas, though, to be exact, they are but the lace lizard (Varanus gouldi), and this lizard is a loathly and abominable looking creature—with his sinister little eyes, long tongue, and ungainly body, furnished with reptilian legs that carry him along at such an astonishing rate—in spite of his beautiful stripes and markings. On the sand ridges up country there used to be numbers of a smaller variety, called by the blacks "udandally" (I'm not sure of the spelling), of which the lacings were a bright clear yellow, and whose physical characteristics were not as repulsive. The homestead was built on 9ft piles, but the udanallies used to scuttle over from the scrub, race up the posts in search of water in the spouting, and after a surprised "canter" on the roof would skin down the posts and away to the scrub again. If they levied toll on the eggs they were never detected, but we waged bitter and relentless war on the big goana.

Before the scrub was cleared they were daily and thrice daily visitors, and for a long time shotting and poisoning did not seem to make an appreciable diminution in their numbers. In spite of "an eye" kept outside, there would come the sound of alarms amongst the poultry and the anguished cluckings of a hen, and a bloated looking goanna would be seen scuttling up the nearest tree bearing its latest victim still struggling in the death throes. Clever as they are at "planting" amongst the branches, many and many a one fell to the rifle, and in time the poultry were able to run in comparative safety from them. Eggs and chickens are their favourite delicacies. The writer remembers the triumph of a black boy who shot an old warrior that had just ascended a tree, after a square meal of a clutch of 15 eggs that should have been running about in the form of chickens in a few days. Their digestive apparatus would seem to be constructed of equal parts of cast iron and elastic. In many parts of timbered country considerable losses amongst young lambs are put down to the presence of goannas, and eye witnesses have told tales of their methods of catching their prey. Without doubting any of these stories, the writer has never come across one tackling a live lamb, but many times, riding through the bush, has come upon them devouring a lamb or a sheep, darting their long cruel-looking tongues backwards and forwards into the carcase with lightning rapidity.

They don't want to fight—as long as there is anywhere to run to—but if absolutely cornered, will show fight, and it is rather amusing to see the dashes and breaks the old goana will make when attacked by a dog, though instinct tells the dog he has a tough customer to deal with, and he goes delicately and with care, knowing the back of the creature is good wearing and tough as an alligator's hide. The poison cart has thinned the numbers of goannas very considerably further in, though, in the matter of rabbits, he fights on the side of the squatter. But the rabbit beats him at multiplication, and about the poultry run and in the lambing paddocks he is emphatically "not wanted."

THE GREY MAGPIE.

(BY "AVIS.")

Towards the end of June the towns on the far Northern Rivers received an unusual visitation in the form of swarms of grey magpies. They arrived quite suddenly; in a single day the towns were alive with them, and their plaintive whistle rang from every tree. At sunrise there was such a jargoning that all other sounds were drowned. It seemed as if they were glad to be alive—and were full to overflowing at the glorious sunny weather which prevailed. Every tree bearing berries was quickly stripped, the camphor laurels coming in for special attention. Unlike most other birds, which are silent when feeding, the visitors were full of joyous music until they had breakfasted, after which silence reigned for a period, broken only by the cry of a dove or peewit—a sort of forlorn effort after the full chorus of the visitors. In a fortnight they had vanished as suddenly as they came—all bound south. A week later came a second but smaller visitation, and these presented a marked contrast to their fellows. They were strangely silent, as if tired by a long journey, and they mostly searched on the ground for food, so thoroughly had the berries been cleaned up before their arrival. These visitors are close relations to the grey magpie of the southern Tableland, with the same untidy appearance, perhaps a trifle smaller, with the same flight, and with eyes of similar colour. But they present some differences. They are blacker in colour, their wings are tipped with white, similar to the true "black magpie," and they turn the ends of the wing feathers slightly upwards as they volplane from a height to a lower perch. Their relations of the south seem to feed mostly on the ground, overturning and prying into the crevices of every piece of wood, and always in silence. Rarely do they visit the towns except in twos or threes, when they show a special taste for the berries of the privet. The visitors were extremely interesting, and appeared to have the spirit of play strongly developed. The members of the first flight were quite friendly, and rarely flew off until one was within 10 or 15 feet of them. With the second flight it was otherwise. They were very shy, and refused to remain in a tree when anyone approached; nor did they seem to play at all. Probably the hunt for food was so keen that their time was fully occupied.

THE WOOL TRADE.

AN IMPROVED SEASON.

Although the recent rains have suspended shearing operations, wool is coming more freely to the seaboard, and over 23,000 bales have been received since July 1. These new clip wools, with a fair quantity of scoured and skin wools from the local fellmongery establishments, will be considerably added to by the time appraisements commence, which will probably be some time next month. Of the appraised wools, a proportion is being shipped and a fair quantity removed to the newly-erected stores for the central wool committee at Wentworth Park, Sydney. The prospects are for an earlier start in appraising this season than last, and no delay in the forwarding of consignments through storage congestion as last season. All the necessary arrangements are made by the selling brokers for the payment on the due date of the retention money and dividend to owners on last season's appraisements. The table of limits for pricing the ensuing season's wool production has been adopted, and arrangements are more complete now for handling the clip than at any time since the wool acquisition was inaugurated. Fortunately, the pastoral outlook is now favourable, the rains this week in the north and west, following on the previous falls, having changed the pastoral position. It will not improve the wool from the areas where drought prevailed, but the change will enable flocks to be returned from the south and south-west to the north and north-west, as well as give promise of a better clip from the affected districts next year. Dalgety and Co. report that Riverina wools give promise of being well grown, sound, and in good condition, but in the near north-west the dry times experienced over the latter half of the wool-growing period are bound to be reflected in the wool. Last year's clip from this part was by no means a good one. This year's will show little, if any, improvement on its predecessor.

THE WOOL-COMBING POSITION.

Considerable satisfaction was expressed by the section of the trade concerned at the decision of the Federal Government on Wednesday in regard to the wool tops position. Members of the trade feel that the wool-combing plants, like the fellmongering works, should be kept going, and all possible use made of the machinery in the Commonwealth for treating wool, whether in scouring, combing, spinning, or weaving; but that, whatever arrangements are made for treating raw wool in any of its stages, none should react injuriously on the other. They felt that the counter proposals made to the Government needed close scrutiny. The nature of the proposals made were not disclosed; but as the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Watt, in the course of his reply to the deputation of the Chamber of Manufactures said, "the Government would be no party to the accumulation of profits in war time to help over after war competition," it was feared by some members of the trade that, although that proposition was made and not entertained, something similar might be adopted. They were concerned in the Government not entering into any engagement by which any top-making company, through its meat company, could exercise any dominating influence in the woolly sheep or mutton markets. Mr. Watt's statement on Wednesday, "that after examining the probable financial effect of the latest proposals made by the companies, the Cabinet had determined to adhere to their former decision, namely, that wool tops could be manufactured by those companies on a basis of 12½ per cent. profits on invested capital, which was equivalent to 16 per cent. on the shareholders' capital engaged in the companies," set their minds at ease. They do not mind whether the wool is combed on commission, like greasy wool is scoured on commission, or whether the companies work under the scheme decided on by the central wool committee, so long as no undue advantage can be exercised over those in other sections of the wool industry.

SKIN-WOOLS AND DIVIDENDS.

An order has been issued by the Central Wool Committee affecting owners of skin-wools; whether buyers of woolly sheep for slaughter, like carcase butchers and meat-companies, or fellmongers, sheepskin buyers, woolscourers, and sheep-skin packing-houses. The State wool committees of the various States have notified the parties concerned that the Central Wool Committee has resolved that, for the ensuing wool season, closing June 30 next, and the following seasons covered by the Imperial purchase scheme, all skin-wools shall be appraised on the official table of limits current for each season, and under the ordinary terms and conditions appertaining to wools that are shorn; and that, at the close of each season, the appraised prices for skin-wools will be adjusted, precisely the same as all shorn wools, on the flat rate, greasy basis, of 15½d per lb; but skin-wools are not to participate in dividends—if any—that may accrue to the pool over and above the average price paid by the British Government. That is to say, owners of skin-wools are to be exempt from any share in the final distribution of any profits; only owners of shorn wools are to participate.

WHERE GROWERS' INTEREST CEASES.

It will be remembered that in the early stages of the acquisition the Prime Minister announced that the British Government had acquired the whole of the wool production of the Commonwealth, as from November 23, 1916, at 15½d per lb in the grease; and that all wools not used for military purposes sold at a profit—presumably after all expenses were paid and the whole acquisition closed—such profit would be equally divided between the growers and the Imperial authorities. Although "growers" were mentioned, it was generally understood that owners were meant whose wool, whether greasy or scoured, went into the pool. What the carcase butchers, fellmongers, sheepskin buyers and others thought was that the resultant wool from sheepskins stood upon exactly the same footing as the wools that were shorn; both as to the flat rate to be paid, as well as in the participation of any profits accruing to the pool. When the flockmaster sells his sheep in the wool, and the carcase butcher, meat company, sheepskin buyer, fellmonger, or other converts, or has converted, such wool into scoured skin wools, it was supposed that he transferred all interest therein to the purchaser; and such buyer supposed that the skin-wools would be treated precisely the same as if shorn and scoured on the station, or at country scours on owners' account. Now they find that such is not to be the case, and they feel that there is an absence of equity in the decision of the committee.

PAST AND PRESENT SEASONS.

The notification relates to the 1918-19 and following wool seasons. No mention is made of what is to be done with regard to skin wools that were appraised last season, and from January to June 30 of the first acquisition period. If owners of skin wools are to participate in any dividend covered by the 1916-17 and 1917-18 wool seasons it seems strange that the principle is not to be observed during the further currency of the acquisition. On the other hand, if they are to be debarred from participation in any dividend at all, from the commencement to the close of the Imperial acquisition, it appears passing strange that no mention is made of such an important matter to those concerned. Some 20,000 bales of skin wools were appraised in Victoria last season, and probably 40,000 bales in Sydney.

SOUTH AFRICAN ACQUISITION.

The South African wool growers were to hold a conference on Thursday to try and induce the Imperial Government to again offer to acquire the South African clip in the terms of a meeting held on June 25 last in the following terms:—"That in view of the serious situation with regard to the 1918-19 wool clip, the Queen's Town Farmers' Association is of the opinion that the interests of South Africa generally can be best served by a conference of all those of the Cape Province who favour a Government scheme being held in the Town Hall, Queen's Town, on Thursday, August 8, 1918, when a decision can be arrived at as to the best method of bringing pressure to bear on the Union Government to approach the Imperial Government. Further, all farmers' associations, agricultural societies, and chambers of commerce of the Cape Province are invited to be represented at this conference."

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

A fair volume of wool has been received by rail during the week, but only a very small quantity by boat. There was an increase for the week in the one case, and a decrease in the other. Present indications point to a less quantity coming to Sydney by boat from Queensland this season than last. There was a decrease last statistical year compared to the previous season, and that feature seems likely to be repeated. The quantity for the week and season to date compares with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

BY RAIL.

Season.	August 2-9. Bales.	July 1-August 9. Bales.
1918-19	6,039	19,450
1917-18	5,129	19,018
Increase	910	Increase 432

BY BOAT.

Season.	August 2-9.	July 1-August 9.
1918-19	88	3,760
1917-18	532	9,661
Decrease	444	Decrease 5,911

Net seaboard decrease for season to date, 5479 bales.

REAL ESTATE.

This was a fairly active week in Real Estate business, yet the volume was not quite so great as a week ago. The indoor sales were, however, well attended, and bidding was brisk for most of the properties offered, but the number sold was fewer than usual. The private sales recorded, however, made up for the deficiency.

The auction on Wednesday in the rooms of Messrs. Hardie and Gorman was largely attended. Mr. Gorman, who handled a fairly lengthly list of properties, had excellent bidding for quite a number. He sold four, subject to approval, but the approval of the vendor in each case has yet to be obtained. During the week, however, this firm sold five houses in Alice-street, Newtown, for £2250; two cottages, Sir Thomas Mitchell-road, Bondi, £1600; a block of land, Eveleigh-street, Redfern, £960; a weatherboard cottage, West-street, Pyrmble, £235; and a cottage, Bellevue-street, North Sydney, £925.

Messrs. Raine and Horne had another large gathering at their fortnightly auction on Thursday. Mr. Rabett submitted 16 very good properties, three of which he sold, and he had real good bidding for quite a number of the others on his list. He disposed of the cottage residence, Camboorya, at Mosman, for £930; a block of land at the corner of Bellevue and Carter streets, North Sydney, he sold at £7 per foot; and on account of Italy's Red Cross Day Fund he disposed of a corner block at Merrylands for £11. This was a very cheap block. For the residence, Clyro, at Bellevue Hill, Mr. Rabett refused an offer of £2900; and the cottage Essex, in Rivers-street, Bellevue Hill, was passed in at £1025; while for the cottage Kaoota, at Hunter's Hill, an offer of £1150 was declined. There was good bidding for several other lots, but they were all below the reserves. During the week this firm had several fairly large sales. It disposed of a residence at Woollahra Point for £12,000, also a residence and nine acres at Warrawee for £10,000. In addition, the firm sold 94 acres at South Lismore at £20 per acre (£1880); 40 acres at Morriset for £100, and an allotment in the Milson's Point Estate, Hawkesbury River, at 20s per foot.

The weekly sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench yesterday was rather poorly attended, and the list of properties submitted was a small one. There was fair bidding for several of the lots, but none were sold. By private contract, however, the firm during the week disposed of quite a number of properties. They sold to the Minister for Defence for Red Cross purposes the freehold of a large residence and grounds in Lyons-road, Drummoyne, for £10,000. They also sold a house and shop, Lodge-street, and shop and dwelling, Catherine-street, Forest Lodge, for £1175; mineral products and right to purchase freehold of a mining property near New Lambton, £850; a cottage, Dover-street, Summer Hill, £875; two allotments, third subdivision, at Eastwood, £200; and three lots, seventh subdivision, at Eastwood, £212; cottage, Fitzroy-street, Burwood, £1150; allotment, Russell Lee Estate, Enfield, £157; allotment, Austinlee Estate, Enfield, £182; cottage, Hampton-street, Ashfield, £875; a cottage, Julliett-street, Enmore, £675; and a cottage, Johnstone-street, Annandale, for £375.

Messrs. Stanton and Son, Ltd., report having sold the following properties during the week:—Brick building of four flats, Arrawa and Bournemouth, with frontage to O'Brien-street, Bondi, £1450, weatherboard cottage, No. 9 Armstrong-street, North Sydney, £450; brick cottage, Wangunyah, with frontage 40ft to Old South Head-road, Vaucluse, £650; block of land, frontage 50ft to Gladstone-avenue, Belmore, at 24/ per foot. This firm will hold their next auction sale in the Real Estate Association rooms on Tuesday, August 20.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. (A. T. Carpenter) sold during the week a cottage, Boundary-road, Chatswood, £1150, and a cottage, Blakesley-street, Chatswood, for £1150.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. (A. T. Carpenter) are offering, at their salerooms, on Thursday next, cottage residences at Abbotsford and North Sydney, building sites at Chatswood and Manly, and the balance of the estate at Gunnamatta Bay, Cronulla, also two shop investments at North Sydney.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that a much better tone prevailed during the week, and a number of satisfactory sales were completed. The principal features were the selection of choice and medium-priced home sites. These were chosen in the Five Dock, Haberfield, Punchbowl, and Manly districts. There was a good call also for farmlet propositions, and several of these were disposed of in the Bankstown, Riverstone, Wentworthville, and Wamberal districts. Woy Woy was again responsible for several seaside blocks being sold, principally on the Pretty Beach and Ettalong Beach estates.

The Coronation Hotel, at the corner of George and Park streets, and the shop property in Park-street, right opposite the Town Hall, is to come under the hammer in the rooms of Messrs. Hardie and Gorman on August 28. There are three prospective buyers in the field, and a lively competition may take place. The property is in the estate of the late Mr. Samuel Hordern.

Mr. G. Gifford Moore reports having sold the following properties in Eastwood recently:—Cottage, Shaftesbury-road, £1400; allotment in same street, £155.

SUBDIVISION WORK.

Following on the success of last year in subdivision work, the property salesmen of Sydney propose to give the public every opportunity in the spring and summer months of this year, to purchase a home site, a week-end allotment, or to indulge in land speculation. This branch of real estate is very active just now, and quite a number of estates, large and small, have come into the market. Surveyors are busy preparing plans, and the local municipal councils have before them quite a number of surveys for approval. There is often a good deal of delay on the part of aldermen in passing plans. This should not be so, where everything is straight sailing, but a number of owners of subdivisions complain of the unnecessary delay on the part of councils in passing plans, and this is certainly not in the public interest. However, in a number of instances auctioneers have been able to fix dates for some of the early sales; while others are fast falling into line. Messrs. Raine and Horne will, on August 31, open the season with a sale of the Wybalena West Estate at Hunter's Hill, when several residences and 34 allotments will come under the hammer. On September 7 this firm will submit an estate at Coalcliff, known as the Old Paterson Estate, comprising main road and ocean frontages. This is some of the best land in Coalcliff, where the miners find it difficult to obtain a site to build their homes upon.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will open the season with two sales on September 7. One subdivision is at Eastwood, where Hunt Hill and Eastwood Extension estates will come under the hammer; and the other subdivision is at Enfield, where the well-known Meads Estate will be offered. On September 28 the firm will submit the second subdivision of Redman's Estate at Belmore. This is part of the old coursing ground.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman have a number of estates to deal with during the approaching season. Although they have not yet fixed dates, among their early sales will be Allen's Estate, right in the heart of Waverley, close to the Bondi Junction; also water frontages and main road sites at Cabarita; the Howe Estate at Liverpool-road, Croydon; a large subdivision at Cheltenham; business and residential sites fronting Lane Cove-road, Pymble; the O'Meara Estate at Carlton; O'Neill's Estate right at the railway station, Guildford; a large subdivision in the town at Port Stephens; and a large estate at Bankstown will also be submitted to auction.

Messrs. Stanton and Son will offer the Wynne's Estate at Enfield on Saturday, August 24. This estate comprises 38 blocks, with frontages to Punchbowl-road tramline and the Wynstay-avenue.

SUPPLY OF CALVES.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

In consequence of the small yardings of large stock at Homebush of late, the South Coast farmers who have consigned calves received highly satisfactory prices, notwithstanding that the yarding of calves was the heaviest for a considerable time. In view of the high prices received for calves this year, farmers express the opinion that the price, as reported, of 25s per head for five-day-old calves at the proposed Government depots is too low.

NEWSPAPERS FOR SOLDIERS.

In view of the notification by the Minister of Defence that the postage of Newspapers to the Troops by Private Individuals is no longer desirable, owing to the increasing scarcity of freight space and the great difficulties of distribution, the "Red Cross" Society and the "War Chest" Fund wish to notify the Public that they have made arrangements to send in bulk adequate quantities of all weekly Newspapers to France, England, and Egypt, to both the men in Hospital and those in the Trenches. A Depot has been established at the "Red Cross" Rooms, 5 Wynyard-street, for the receipt and despatch of Newspapers; and all left there, or in the receptacles provided for the purpose under the authorisation of the "Red Cross," will be divided equally between the "Red Cross" Society and the "War Chest" Fund.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1918.

AN ALLIED VICTORY.

Nothing could be more welcome or more important at the present time than the report of the victory of the Allied armies under Sir Douglas Haig which is published this morning. It demonstrates the fact which was required to complete the impression made by the victory of the French generals over the armies of the Crown Prince. It proves that the successful advance towards the Aisne and the Vesle did not depend on the concentration of the only forces fit for attack at the disposal of the Allies. It corroborates the lesson of General Mangin's tactics, that the Allies, in spite of their strategic disadvantages and of their less complete training, are as well able as the Germans to effect a surprise. We can judge how far it will help to complete the process of disillusionment by recalling the statements issued to the German people by their expert advisers. The Minister for War told them some weeks ago that Marshal Foch's reserves had already been destroyed. The very conservative critic of the "Frankfurter Zeitung," after an analysis of the results achieved between March 21 and June 25, estimated that of 190 divisions available to the Allies at the beginning of the offensive hardly more than twenty had not suffered more or less. After observing that new recruits could not be sufficient in numbers nor of the same quality, and that the Americans could be considered only indirectly as far as fighting was concerned, he drew the following conclusion:—"If, therefore, we say that Foch's reserve army no longer exists it is not only fully confirmed by our calculations but it is clear that the inner effects of German strategy go much further than this." The inner effects of German strategy have undoubtedly been very serious, if by them the writer means that the strain on Allied man-power has increased with the increase in the length of the German line and in the strength of its flanks. But the line cannot be held without an abundance of troops sufficient to meet an offensive with frequent counter-attacks. Sir Douglas Haig's victory confirms our hope that the picked troops of the enemy have suffered very severely. The critic of the "Frankfurter" asserts that "as we have been constantly assured the enemy losses have been very much heavier than ours, which is easily explained by our superior tactics and strategic superiority." It is the rule that in a successful offensive the attack suffers less than the defence, and until July the outstanding events of this year had been overwhelming German attacks at St. Quentin, at Armentieres, and on the Aisne heights. But it is an almost equally invariable rule that an unsuccessful attack on a large scale is the most costly of all operations. Mr. Lloyd George reminded us yesterday that in their defence of Arras, of the Channel ports, and of Amiens the British had defeated the Germans in two or three of the most costly battles of the war. When they turned their armies to the south the Germans began with a great victory. But when they had lost the benefit of their surprise they met a gallant and well-prepared French army, yielding ground only after having exacted the utmost possible price for it, and after their advance to the Marne they suffered the defeat which exhausted not only the armies of the Crown Prince but the reserves sent by Prince Rupprecht to help him. Gradually they are beginning to verify, not the assertion of their Minister for War, but the prophecy uttered by their late Foreign Minister in his fatal speech. "The idea of world domination in Europe is a Utopia, as proved by Napoleon. The nation which tried it would as happened to France, bleed to death in useless battle, and would be grievously injured and lowered in her development." One may here apply von Moltke's phrase, "Woe to him who sets Europe on fire."

A correspondent on the Italian front described recently how at one of the training schools men were taught to advance first in the manner of 1914, and afterwards in the manner of 1918. The contrast is forcibly illustrated in this battle as the French and the British armies moved forward between the Ancre and the Avre from very near the furthest limits of the German advance towards the line taken up by them in 1914. The general officer commanding the British had seen the war in all its vicissitudes, from the first heroic defence of Ypres through the even more terrible days of the opening of the Somme offensive to the recovery of the British from their defeat in March. The instruments of victory to-day are very different from those of 1914, or even of 1916. The tank, instead of being a clumsy, lumbering waggon, is as handy as a polo pony. The machine-gun is no longer mainly a weapon of defence, but is supplied in such a form and in such numbers that it takes a leading part in the assault. Motor transport and lighter weapons have removed many of the causes which seemed to make a deadlock the only possible end of trench warfare, and a strategic victory impossible. New weapons of assault and means of transport have made surprise again an element in success, in spite of the increased vigilance of aircraft. These changes, however, have in no way diminished the importance of the non-technical arms, or of the generals who plan the attack. This victory has not been gained without very hard fighting. Success has not been absolutely uniform, and at one point the defence has prevailed. The advance has penetrated beyond a thinly-held line, and has met troops of a high quality. The strategy of the advance will not be clear until we see how far the attack is to proceed. It follows the plan of 1917 of advancing eastward and northward at the same time, but it may be intended merely to improve the positions to be held until the main offensive is ready. Obviously it has done a great deal already by completing the work begun at Villers-Bretonneux and Hamel. As General Mangin's victory relieved Paris so the victory of Sir Douglas Haig and General Debeny has relieved Amiens and the railway behind it, and has made of Montdidier a dangerous salient. As the victory in the south was made possible by General Gouraud's defence so this has been made possible by the defence of the Ancre, the Somme, the Luce, and the Avre. Australia has had a splendid share in what may be one of the most important battles of the war. Her soldiers prepared the way for the attack and participated in it, but they would not have had their opportunity if their comrades had not held the Ancre and enabled consummate generals to turn the attack on their vital centres into a series of dangerous and untenable salients.

AUSTRALIA'S DUTY.

To almost every Ally has come at some time or other a period of, one will not say war-apathy, but momentary discouragement which has immediately reacted on national effort. Sacrifices have been so great and their compensation seems so distant. The war drags on from year to year with no sign of an end, and the glad hopes cherished in the earlier days and renewed by over-optimistic prophecies show small sign of fulfilment. Private grief occupies so many households that the slough of despond looms larger than the ultimate goal. All the Allies have had this experience. It has been reflected in a dozen ways, all of which have been sedulously taken into account in the calculations of the enemy, for Germany's political strategy has been based on the conviction that the Allies possess less stamina, less "will to conquer" than herself. With most of the Allies this has been merely a momentary phase which has now been forgotten in a fresh resolution to redouble every possible effort; it is comparable to the painful moment of depression and weariness which the runner feels before he has got his second wind. If he has the endurance to go on and the intelligence to realise that his rival is in hardly a better case his energy will be renewed; if he gives up he confesses himself a "quitter," and in the race between the Allies and Germany failure means loss of many things besides reputation—as Russia can testify. This phase of war-weariness may be short, but is dangerous. It allows all manner of doubtful elements to gain a bearing and exercise an influence impossible in times when a nation is concentrated upon the business of bringing the war to a victorious conclusion. "Defeatists," perverse pacificists, crazy doctrinaires, and cranks of every description find an audience. Sedition, which hid as long as the nation pursued its task with vigour, slinks from its hole and spreads its poison. We have seen the process at work in Russia, where a movement that began with high ideals and loyal aspirations was turned into disastrous channels by forces which played upon the black mood of depression. We must recognise the fact that in Australia we have reached a similar phase; our first fine enthusiasm which embraced every class in Australia seems to have waned. We are no longer the Australia who promised her last man and her last shilling, and was determined to make the promise good. There are some who seek excuses for the failure to honour our obligations; there are some who would repudiate them altogether. They are, we trust, a small section of our people, but they are vociferous and they are swift and cunning to take advantage of any symptom in Australia that offers scope for their insidious attentions. During the first two years of the war little was heard of them. At the first referendum on conscription they declared that they pinned their faith on the voluntary system of recruiting; during the second they said that Australia had done enough; now they dare to suggest that Australia should withdraw her army unless the Allies furnish satisfactory credentials about their motives and intentions!

This state of affairs would have seemed incredible two years ago, but it is with us now, and it has to be taken seriously. Those who in season and out endeavour to prevent recruiting may be misguided or frankly malicious. But in any case their influence is alive and at work; every drop in the recruiting figures represents to them both results and incentives to further action. Their influence must be fought against. Positive evils must be corrected by positive means and a vigorous counter-offensive may neutralise the efforts of these gallant gentlemen who hate their own countrymen so much that they love Germany more. It is a healthy sign that the public is now beginning to declare that its toleration is not unbounded. The formation of the body, "the King's Men," in Sydney and the deputation in Melbourne to the Acting Prime Minister which suggested that there was room and need for more war propaganda in Australia show that large and responsible sections of our people are convinced that some stimulus is needed to awake Australia from the lethargy into which she has fallen, and from which she may awake with disgraceful memories. Some will ask what possible use propaganda can be at this time of day. None save those who refuse to be persuaded, deny that Britain was bound in honour as well as interest to enter the war; none save those who refuse to be persuaded deny that Britain is bound by honour as well as interest to remain in the war until a military decision is achieved. There is still ignorance to dispel, ignorance about the conduct of the war rather than its causes; there is still the lack of perspective which makes an individual grievance, real or imaginary, an excuse for wishing the fall of the Empire; there is still the dissatisfaction at the temporary stringencies of war which allow the orator to vapour about "Prussianism in Australia," forgetting that he is allowed more license in Australia than anywhere in the belligerent world. If any great proportion of Australians were disloyal, propaganda would be futile, but we believe that the majority of Australians are absolutely loyal. Virtue has not departed from Australia with the A.I.F. But Australia is certainly in need of something to wake her up, and any effort that can bring home to her her immediate duty will do good service. The "whisperers" and those who are working for Germany none the less surely because they do not know it or pretend not to know it, are having things too much their own way. If the "King's Men" in their hundreds of thousands can counteract this influence they will live up to their title.

Brigadier-General C. Rosenthal, C.B., C.M.G., who was appointed to the command of the 22nd Division of the A.I.F. in the changes that followed upon Sir John Monash's elevation to the chief command of the A.I.F. in the field, has been promoted to the rank of major-general. The new major-general held the rank of major of Field Artillery in the Australian military forces when he was appointed to the A.I.F. in August, 1914. He reached the rank of Brigadier-General on February 2, 1916, and was appointed to command the 9th Infantry Brigade. INELIGIBLES' BATTALION REJECTED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Suggestions that men over the age of 45 years should be enlisted in the A.I.F., said the Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, to-day, had been placed before the Army Council and General Officer Commanding of the Australian Imperial Forces time after time, and had been rejected on each occasion. They had reported that it was no use sending men over 45 years, as there was no place for them in the front line. As far as Class B men were concerned, there were ample partially disabled A.I.F. men quite fit to fill all the positions in the A.I.F. The position was different in Great Britain, because they had to provide for home defence and keep a home guard. The suggestions of Mr. Arthur Griffith had, therefore, been rejected.

PREFERENCE FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

BATHURST, Friday.

The Minister for Repatriation wrote to the Turon Shire Council, asking it to give absolute preference to returned soldiers. The council decided to accede to the request.

ANZAC DAY INCIDENT.

(BY WILLIE WOMBAT.)

FRANCE, April 25.

I must describe a little incident I saw to-day—Anzac Day. In a shell-battered village not very far behind the line where Australians were billeted all civilians have gone with the exception of a couple of old men; an Australian Flag was flying from a billet. It was not a very large one, yet it served the purpose. The flag hung from a shattered window, underneath which was printed in charcoal on the whitewashed wall, "Pessimists shot on sight." The flag attracted the attention of the two old French warriors, one minus an arm and the other a leg—veterans of 1870—who wanted to know all about the flag. On it being explained to them that it was the flag of Australia, and that it flew in memory of Anzac Day, they said "Tres bien. Vivent les Australiens." About ten minutes afterwards the two old men returned with a tri-colour fluttering in the breeze. Going to one of our boys, standing at the doorway, they said, "Pardon, monsieur," passed inside, and, climbing the tumble-down stairs, reached the window and proudly crossed the tri-colour with the flag of Australia. As they performed the ceremony they exclaimed again and again, "Vivent les Australiens—Vive la France." Despite the fact that several shells fell in the vicinity, these two old warrior patriots of France all day hovered round the spot where the two flags were proudly floating in the breeze.

RECORD PREMIERSHIP.

MR. HOLMAN'S LONG TERM.

To-day Mr. Holman achieves the record for a continuous term of Premiership in this State. Before the day closes he will have been Premier without a break longer than Sir George Reid, whose term lasted for five years, one month, and ten days.

Yesterday Mr. Holman was made the recipient of a presentation to mark the occasion from metropolitan and provincial pressmen. Speeches apropos of the event were made by Messrs. Crouch, Mansell, Colless, Amati, Bell, and Tiernan. The presentation took the form of a fencing helmet and a pair of fencing gauntlets, which were most highly appreciated by the Premier, who is a devotee of the swordsman's art.

Next week Mr. Holman is to be entertained by his supporters in his own electorate of Cootamundra. He is to leave Sydney on Tuesday, in company with the Minister for Education, Mr. James, and will attend the opening of the new school at Temora on Wednesday. On Thursday he will be banqueted at Cootamundra, at which function a number of his Parliamentary colleagues propose to be present.

Mr. Holman has been a Minister of the Crown altogether for over eight years. His first office was that of Attorney-General in the first Labour Government formed after the 1910 elections under Mr. J. S. T. M'Gowen. On June 30, 1913, some months prior to the next general election, Mr. M'Gowen retired from the Premiership, and Mr. Holman was elected as the head of the Government, in which capacity he has won two general elections since. Six members of his first Cabinet are still in Parliament. Two of them, Messrs. M'Gowen and Flowers, are in the Upper House. The other members of the original Holman Government still in Parliament are Messrs. Edden, Carmichael, and Hall, but Mr. Hall is the only one still in the Ministry. Of the remaining three (the Ministry consisted of nine in those days), one, the late Mr. J. L. Trefle, is dead, Mr. J. B. Cann is now a Railway Commissioner, while Mr. Griffith is out of Parliament. The Ministry has been reconstructed twice during Mr. Holman's Premiership. After the 1913 general elections, Messrs. M'Gowen and Edden retired from the Government, and Messrs. Hoyle, Estell, and Ashford were elected to Ministerial rank. The death of Mr. Trefle and the resignation of Mr. Carmichael made room for the elevation to Cabinet rank of Mr. George Black and Mr. Grahame, the latter of whom is still with his old chief, while Mr. Black is not now in the Lower House. The second reconstruction of the Cabinet was on the formation of the National party, just prior to the last general election.

STATE FINANCE.

INDEPENDENT LOAN POLICY.

At the conclusion of a meeting of the State Cabinet yesterday the Premier and Treasurer, Mr. Holman, said it had been arranged that he should deliver the annual budget speech in Parliament next Wednesday week. All the estimates of expenditure, including those of the Railway and Education departments, would be ready before then. Practically all the other departments have now been dealt with. Owing to the absence from yesterday's meeting of Mr. James, the Cabinet could not give further consideration to the question of teachers' salaries, and the absence on tour of the Chief Railway Commissioner is holding up the estimates of his department. The Government proposes to go right on with the financial business of the session after the budget speech has been delivered, in order to get it out of hand before the expiry of the three months for which the recent amendment of the Audit Act gave the Government supply. It is hoped that the introduction of this practice will obviate the always unsatisfactory method of running along for several months on temporary supply bills.

From a statement made by Mr. Holman yesterday it is clear that this State does not intend, at least at present, to enter the Commonwealth scheme for the raising of all State loan moneys through the Federal authority. The Premier said: "The Cabinet was engaged this afternoon in considering the Loan Estimates, and gave special attention to the proposal made by the Acting Prime Minister to put the loan policy of the State into the Commonwealth pool with the other States. The decision arrived at is not a final one, but it was determined, in view of the circumstances which Mr. Watt had stated to us, the position in which we stand to-day on the London market to allow for further consideration of his proposal at a somewhat later date when we have more definite information as to matters in London.

"The arrangements already made," he went on, "secure a continuance of the public works policy of this State at a modest rate practically for the balance of this financial year, under any circumstances. By a modest rate Ministers have in view an annual expenditure at the rate of about £3,500,000, as compared with the £9,000,000 per annum which was being spent when the war broke out. There is, therefore, no urgent need to settle the matter, and the general feeling of New South Wales Ministers was that no very urgent reason for a change in methods, either as affecting the Federal or State financing, was disclosed in the course of the conference we had with Mr. Watt."

A PREMATURE PEACE.

WHAT IT WOULD MEAN.

The welcome news from the front provided a setting for the Attorney-General's speech last night in officially opening the new recruiting depot at the junction of Parramatta and City roads.

The "bully" of Europe, said Mr. Hall, after four years, was beginning to sag at the knees at last. This was the time, not to talk of peace by negotiation, but to hit out, and thus guarantee a peace worthy of the name. (Applause.) It was because he and those with him on the platform held the view that they were associating themselves with that and every other effort to see that the war went on until we had the only peace worth having—the peace that would come when the Allies dictated their terms to a beaten foe. If this war were to end to-morrow it would end with Germany still in possession of 20,000 square miles in France and in Belgium, 30,000 square miles around Servia and Montenegro, and a kingdom through Poland and Russia bigger than the kingdom of Germany itself. If this war ended to-morrow—if Germany was prepared to sell out cheap and go back to her own frontier, receiving back her own colonies and adjusting the frontiers of France and of Belgium as we would have them adjusted—what would be her attitude in days to come? What would the German father and the German mother tell their children? They would say that after four years their country had defied the world—that they paralysed Russia, made Roumania sue for peace, overran Belgium, defied the nations for over four years, and made America, France, and England, and the other Allies glad enough to go in for peace by negotiation, while no enemy trod their soil except as prisoners. Did we think that that would end militarism in Germany? If the war ended to-morrow it would enthrone militarism in Germany for all the years to come, and that would mean that we in Australia and every other democratic country in the world, would be called upon to worship the god of war for the life of this and the next generation. He did not fear a German military autocracy in Australia. He feared an Australian military autocracy unless militarism was overthrown in this struggle, because all the world must live in preparation for war if the militarism of the Central Powers was not now overthrown definitely and decisively. (Applause.)

HAIG'S VICTORIOUS BLOW

FORWARD ON 20-MILE FRONT

MANY PRISONERS AND GUNS

TANKS AND CAVALRY IN ACTION

British and French forces under Sir Douglas Haig, assisted by tanks, delivered a surprise attack on Thursday morning.

On a front of over 20 miles north of Montdidier they stormed the German defences and advanced rapidly, gaining all objectives during the afternoon.

The maximum penetration at some points is between seven and eight miles, and many villages have been taken.

The captures have not been counted, but a comparatively early estimate placed them at 7000 men and 100 guns.

Australians took part in the advance.

THE OFFICIAL STATEMENTS.

LONDON, Aug. 9.

Sir Douglas Haig on Thursday night reported: The operations which were begun this morning on the Amiens front by the French First Army, under General Debeny, and the British Fourth Army, under General Rawlinson, are proceeding satisfactorily.

The Allied troops assembled under cover of night unnoticed by the enemy. At the hour of assault French, Canadian, Australian, and English divisions, assisted by a large number of British tanks, stormed a front of over 20 miles, from the Avre, at Braches, to the neighbourhood of Morlancourt. The enemy was surprised, and we made rapid progress at all points. At an early hour our first objectives were reached on the whole front.

During the morning the infantry's advance continued, actively assisted by British cavalry, light tanks, and motor machine gun batteries. The German resistance was overcome at certain points after sharp fighting, many prisoners and guns being captured.

The French gallantly attacked and crossed the Avre despite opposition, and carried hostile defences.

The greater part of our final objectives northward of the Somme were gained before noon, but in the neighbourhood of Chipilly and southward of Morlancourt the enemy offered prolonged resistance. Finally, however, our troops broke down this resistance and gained their objectives with gallantry and dash.

The Allied infantry southward of the Somme gained during the afternoon their final objectives on the whole front, assisted by light tanks and armoured cars. Cavalry passed through the infantry, and beyond the objectives, riding down German transport and limbers in retreat. They surrounded and captured villages, taking many prisoners. We have reached the general line of Plessier-Rosainvillers (three miles south-east of Moreuil), Beaucourt, Caix, Framerville (nearly nine miles east of Villers-Bretonneux), Chipilly (on the Somme), and westward of Morlancourt. It is impossible to estimate the prisoners, guns, and material taken, but we have captured several thousand prisoners and many guns.

A French communique issued on Thursday afternoon stated: At 5 o'clock this morning we, in conjunction with the British troops, attacked south-east of Amiens. The attack is developing in favourable conditions.

A French communique on Thursday night stated: The attack we began in the morning south-east of Amiens, in conjunction with the British, was continued under good conditions. Details are published in the British communique.

100 GUNS AND 7000 PRISONERS

Mr. Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons last night:—"By three o'clock this afternoon all our objectives had been taken, with 100 guns and 7000 prisoners.

"The maximum advance was seven miles, with an average of five miles."

Mr. Bonar Law added that the Fourth British Army, comprised of English, Australian, and Canadian troops, was attacking on a front of 20 kilometres, from Morlancourt to Montdidier. He had just been informed by telephone from headquarters that all the objectives which were sought when the attack began were gained before 3 in the afternoon.

The ground gained was of obvious strategic importance. He did not desire to exaggerate the importance of the achievement. Possibly the Germans, owing to previous attacks, had intended to retire, but the attack was a complete surprise, upsetting whatever plans the Germans had formed. "The result can be said, without exaggeration, to indicate a complete change in the military position in the last few weeks," he added.

GERMAN ADMISSION.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

The German evening official report stated: Between the Ancre and the Avre the enemy forced his way into our positions

RAPID ADVANCE WITH TANKS.

The correspondent of the United Press says: The British went on first with the tanks, whose noses kept well against the steel wall of the creeping barrage, and were supported by fast "whippets" in miniature British tanks), while swarms of battleplanes were engaged. The new battle went well for the Allies, all the first objectives being taken.

The attack began shortly after 4 a.m. The battlefield was covered with a thick haze, making flying difficult, but it thus gave an advantage to the Allies. The French on the right by agreement came in a few minutes later, their artillery having smothered the territory south of the Amiens-Roye road beforehand. Tiny "whippets" raced and dodged across the fields, scattering terror everywhere and running down the Germans. The country is hilly, but mostly open, and ideal for the tanks. These crossed the Avre without trouble, and led the infantry into the battle. They blasted their way forward with machine guns and cannon.

Up to 8 a.m. few, if any, German aeroplanes had appeared, but despite the haze the Allied machines added to the enemy's confusion on the ground. The prisoners include Wurtemburgers, Bavarians, and other German peoples from half a dozen different divisions. The weather was good, with a few clouds here and there.

By 9 a.m. the weather had thickened, and was threatening rain.

THREAT TO MONTDIDIER.

The United Press correspondent, telegraphing from France on Thursday night, stated: There is great confusion behind Prince Rupprecht's front. Airmen report the rapid flight of transport towards the Somme. A number of high officers already are among the prisoners. One German general was last seen running headlong, chased by a tank, which was machine-gunning him.

We now directly threaten Montdidier. Airmen are harassing enemy traffic into and out of the salient, especially across the Somme bridges. Our casualties were exceptionally light, especially at the beginning of the operations. Prince Rupprecht's reply, whether by artillery, infantry, or aeroplanes, so far has been feeble, but with the coming up of reinforcements his resistance will stiffen.

EXPECTATIONS EXCEEDED.

Mr. Percival Phillips telegraphs: The attack undoubtedly will rank as a great campaign battle. I think I may say that it has exceeded expectations in rapidity and completeness with which everything we started to accomplish has been attained. The strategic advantage gained by this magnificent stroke is too great yet to be fully realised while the smoke is still rolling over many miles of recovered territory. The swiftness and efficiency with which we effected our concentration enabled us completely to surprise the enemy on the whole front below the Somme. The night had passed quietly, and the troops took up their assembly positions without any attempt at molestation. The only spot where the enemy showed uneasiness was in the region of Morlancourt, twice putting down a protective barrage before dawn.

The enemy probably assumed that we would attempt further to exploit Wednesday's successful counter-attack in this sector. Thanks to the almost ceaseless Allied artillery fire the enemy for the most part was unable to develop any formidable system of defence such as we had to overcome on the Somme in 1916, and in Flanders in 1917. The consciousness of this weakness probably is responsible for the recent withdrawals.

The preliminary bombardment consisted of three minutes' whirlwind fire on the front position. Then the field-guns and trench-mortars began to lengthen out in a creeping barrage, whilst the heavy guns continued to pound away on the spots likely to prove troublesome. Hundreds of tanks advanced with infantry waves, many crossing the Avre with gratifying ease.

ALBANIA.

ENEMY REPULSED.

A French Eastern communique states: In Albania the Austrians last night and to-day renewed their violent attacks against our new front. They were everywhere repulsed. We took 120 prisoners.

The Australian Press Association states that the Italians in Albania were forced further to retire near Berat, causing the French left wing to fall back in conformity. The retirement has ceased, and the Allies are expected to hold their present positions.

An Italian naval communique states: Our seaplanes dropped 600 kilogrammes of bombs on Friday night last and 1500 on Tuesday morning on military works and docks in Durazzo effectively.

AUSTRIA WORRIED.

Austrian newspapers despondently refer to the prominent part taken by the American troops in Marshal Foch's offensive, and predict that the Americans will be similarly prominent on the Italian front. One paper asks how the German General Staff proposes to meet the enormous addition of Americans to the Allies' strength.

IRISH HOME RULE.

ULSTERMEN'S RIFLES.

Mr. Shortt (Chief Secretary for Ireland), in the House of Commons, said that during recess he, with the Government Committee, would endeavour to get some Home Rule measure into a shape which would ensure it passing through the House.

The Government, he added, intended to secure the Ulstermen's rifles, if without trouble so much the better.

SOUTH AFRICAN RECRUITING.

According to a message from Capetown, a marching tour by a contingent of South African troops recruited for oversea service, with a view to stimulating recruiting in western province towns with mainly Dutch population, has proved a great success. The contingent everywhere was most cordially received. Many recruits of Dutch extraction were obtained, including a good proportion of Nationalists who have hitherto been strongly against recruiting.

ACROSS THE VESLE.

GAIN OF GROUND.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

It is reported from Washington that additional American forces have crossed the Vesle west of Fismes. The Americans are meeting counter-attacks.

The Germans are attempting by means of barrages to prevent further crossings. Bayonet fighting occurred at several places. The Americans are endeavouring to drive the enemy from the high ground near Bazoches.

An American official report states: We gained ground northward of the Vesle.

WESTERN FRONT.

POSITION REVIEWED.

The Australian Press Association learns that the Germans hold the Vesle line in considerable strength. Although it is reported that they have withdrawn their heavy guns and some of their forces are over the Aisne, no preparations for a general retirement are apparent.

The Germans on the Franco-British front, between Montdidier and the sea, retired at various points in varying depths, which probably can be explained by a desire to improve their defensive positions. The withdrawal in the Lys sector was due to the marshy ground, and the fact that our positions dominated him, but it is difficult to understand the slight retirement at Givenchy. It is possible that the Lys retirement may be the preliminary of a general withdrawal.

On the other hand the enemy's scheme may only be to strengthen his front between Bailleul and La Bassee Canal. In effect, however, it reduces the probability or danger of a renewed offensive.

The Franco-British between Moreuil and Morlancourt made a substantial advance to a depth of about 4000 yards. It is reported that Moreuil, Demuin, Abancourt, and Morlancourt are in our hands, also heights west of Cerisy and south of Morlancourt. General Sir Henry Rawlinson commands the Fourth Army, and General Anthoine the French Army.

Our recent air raids have forced the enemy to detach a large number of fighting machines from the front as a protection for German towns. During a raid on Saarbrucken our aviators encountered 40 enemy machines.

A review of the Marne offensive reveals Foch's remarkable patience and foresight. When the British received a severe reverse, and when the position on the Western front was compromised, Foch met one German blow after another, but refused to make a premature counter-offensive until the psychological moment, when the Germans were exhausted at Reims, and after they had made progress on the Marne front. It required great firmness on Foch's part to disregard the danger of throwing in the whole of his reserves in a great counter-thrust, which proved successful. Had it failed it would have been disastrous to the French, and the Germans would have gained the Marne without difficulty.

The splendid response of America, in throwing in troops who were only partially trained and unaccustomed to war conditions, reflected the greatest credit on the nation. We are justified in saying that the situation is more favourable than at any time since 1914. We have overwhelming evidence of Germany's declining manpower, and can say that the end is in sight, because of our growing resources from America. Humanly speaking, if we hold fast we can achieve a crushing victory over Germany in the field, while the political and moral situation of the Central Powers may tend to hasten the end.

AIR WARFARE.

BRITISH AND FRENCH ACTIVE.

The British Air Ministry reports: Aeroplanes successfully attacked explosive factories at Rombach with good results. All returned.

Sir Douglas Haig on Thursday night reported: We dropped over 17 tons of bombs in the day-time on Wednesday with good effect. Fifteen hostile machines were brought down, and seven driven down uncontrollable. Two British are missing. Bad weather hampered operations at night. A ton of bombs was dropped. One of our night-fliers is missing.

A French communique states that 184 enemy aeroplanes were brought down in July, and 154 were seen to fall disabled in the German lines. Our aeroplanes in July set fire to 49 enemy captive balloons. Our bombing 'planes during July dropped 194 tons of projectiles during the day and 356 tons by night on the Marne bridges, enemy troops south of the Aisne, and stations in the region of Laon, Hirsin, and Rethel.

YACHT SINKS U-BOAT.

An armed yacht destroyed a submarine in the English Channel. She sighted the periscope, drove over the spot, rammed the conning-tower, and dropped depth charges. A disturbance was observed, in the midst of which bubbling occurred, indicating volumes of air escaping. The yacht picked up the submarine's sole survivor covered with oil. He died from internal injuries.

BRITISH MERCANTILE TONNAGE.

Sir Leo Chiozza Money (Parliamentary Secretary to the Shipping Controller) stated in the House of Commons that the total British ocean-going mercantile steam tonnage at the outbreak of war was 18,500,000, the gross tonnage being now 18,000,000.

CELLULOSE COMPANY.

INQUIRY INTO OPERATIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

The report of the Select Committee on the Swiss Cellulose Company, which is registered as the British Cellulose Company, reveals that there has been no supervision. The company got relief from income tax, also excess profits tax, and finally got the State to agree to pay the capital expenditure, although the latter was not economical. The company secured a monopoly of cellulose acetate, the principal ingredient in varnish for aeroplane wings, and received a contract of the value of £3,000,000.

The company's capital consisted of 160,000 sixpenny shares. Subsequently the shareholders received £14 10s shares for each sixpenny share. The chief shareholders are Dr. Camille Dreyfus, of Basle, Vickers Limited, and the Prudential Trust of Montreal.

Mr. Bonar Law, in the House of Commons, announced the appointment of a commission under a judge to inquire into the formation and financial arrangements of the company.

Mr. Bonar Law, in the House of Commons, announced that Lord Sumner, Lord Inchcape, and Lord Colwyn had been appointed as a committee to inquire into the charges against the British Cellulose Company.

EXPORTATION OF COTTON PIECE GOODS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

An Order-in-Council has been gazetted which prohibits the exportation of cotton piece goods suited for use as meat wraps, cheese cloths, and similar articles.

DEATH OF MRS. J. EVISTON.

Mrs. John Eviston, an old and respected resident of Bathurst, died during the week of cerebral hemorrhage, at the age of 72. The deceased lady was a native of Rinsoutry, County Tipperary, Ireland, and is survived by a husband and family of four sons—the Rev. Father Eviston (Wellington), the Rev. Brother Alphonsus (Orange), Mr. T. Eviston (Brisbane), and Mr. M. Eviston (Bathurst)—and four daughters—Sister M. Patrick (Convent of Mercy, Carcoar), Mesdames J. and P. J. Purcell (Woodstock), and Miss Eviston (Bathurst).

ARCHANGEL.

ALLIES MOVE SOUTH.

WELCOMED BY PEOPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

The occupation of Archangel was skilfully prepared, and was carried out with complete success, notwithstanding a Bolshevik proclamation exhorting their troops to massacre Allied subjects. The railway line is now clear for 66 miles, despite Trotsky's order to destroy it.

A report from Archangel states that Bolshevik reinforcements arrived at Isakogorke, the next station to Archangel. White Guards attacked and drove them out. They also took many prisoners. Anti-Bolshevik revolutions have broken out in several districts within a radius of 200 miles of Archangel.

According to a Paris message, the "Petit Parisien" says that the new Provisional Government in Archangel will shortly be officially confirmed.

After landing at Archangel, the Allies advanced southward along the Vologda railway. An opposing force, supported by Germans, offered resistance five miles south of Archangel, but they were driven back, and retired towards Obozerskaya, 70 miles south of Archangel. Some German war material was captured.

The Australian Press Association learns that the population of Northern Russia warmly welcomed the Allied occupation, which was accomplished without a casualty. The Bolsheviks withdrew to the southern bank of the Dwina, whence they were driven by shellfire. The Allies have since pushed rapidly along the railway southward towards Vologda. The hostile forces number about 8000, including 1800 armed Maximalists, 400 Letts, 500 seamen, and a large force of workmen.

THREAT TO CZECHS.

The Bolshevik Government is doing its utmost to overwhelm the Czechs before they can receive Allied support. It is reported that the Bolsheviks have come to an agreement with the Germans whereby the latter will not advance on Russia's western lines, thus permitting the Bolsheviks to concentrate their forces against the Czechs in the Volga region.

Considerable Russian forces are reported to be co-operating with the Czechs in Western Siberia. Good quality troops, with many Cossacks and peasantry, are also co-operating.

It is believed that the Turks have been required at Baku, which remains in Armenian hands. Although one cannot depend upon their ability to hold on, nevertheless their situation has been improved by the widespread anti-Bolshevik rising in trans-Caspia. It is believed that the Caspian fleet remains friendly towards the Entente.

THE FAR EAST.

A message from Tientsin says that Colonel Semenoff (commanding the Cossacks in Siberia) is co-operating with the Czecho-Slovaks, and is preparing to proceed to Vladivostock.

It is officially announced in Washington that Major-General William Graves, former Assistant-Chief of the General Staff, will command the American expeditionary force in Siberia, which will be composed of two regiments of infantry from the Philippines, and other troops totalling 7000. Japan will send a similar number.

The Shanghai correspondent of the "New York Times" says the British troops which landed in Vladivostock were accorded a friendly reception.

LOST ZEPPELIN.

An Amsterdam message says a German official announcement admits the loss of the Zeppelin which was brought down off the English coast. The newspapers lament the death of the Zeppelin's commander, Strasser, who commanded the German air fleet, and participated in most of the raids on England.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

A Paris message reports the arrival of a large Siamese contingent.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law stated that the Crown Law officers in England, Scotland, and Ireland, were unanimously of the opinion that women are not eligible for nomination as Parliamentary candidates.

The Committee on Emergency Legislation recommends a bill defining the phase "end of the war," as the date when the peace treaty shall be binding.

Advices from Zurich state that the output of war material in the Rhine provinces has been greatly reduced owing to the air raids of the Allies destroying factories.

A report from Berne states that, in addition to General von Planitz, two major-generals and sixteen high officers have been retired as punishment for the Marne defeat.

A Copenhagen report says it transpires that the King of Bulgaria and family have arrived at Nauheim (Germany) incognito. They will probably make a long stay.

A.I.F. COLLECTION.

The counting of the money in connection with the A.I.F. Memorial appeal was continued during yesterday. The total now stands at £37,655/14/5.

GERMAN AMBITION.

A BAR TO REAL PEACE.

LONDON, August 8.

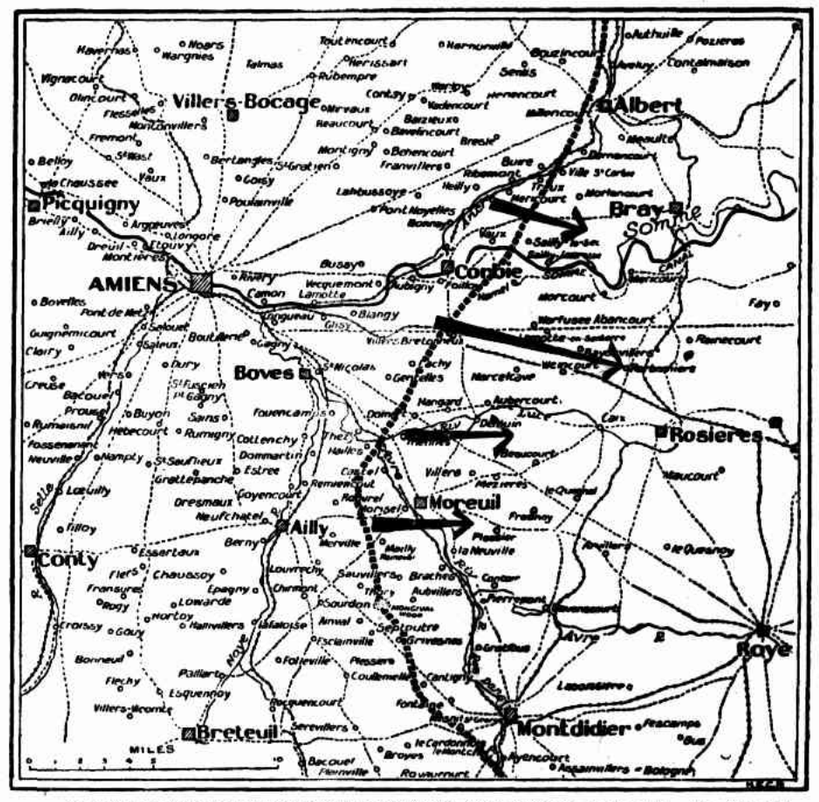
Mr. Balfour (Foreign Secretary), replying in the House of Commons to protests against the Government's alleged failure to respond to peace feelers and declare its views on the League of Nations, said that Germany was so determined to get nations under her heel that she cynically and audaciously ignored national boundaries when she thought she had the power to do so. It was absolutely certain that there would be wars in the future, and that Germany's war-waging powers would be enormously increased, unless the Entente remedied such a state of affairs. He was unable to see anything in the actions, statements, or writings of the German Government, politicians, or publicists, affording the slightest hope that peace discussions would be fruitful now. An almost impassable abyss separated the Entente and the Central Powers.

If Germany's African colonies were restored, it would mean that Germany would have submarine bases against all trade routes, and would be able to create a great black army for aggression. It would be a calamity for humanity unless the war resulted in changing the heart of Germany, or unless a complete Entente victory proved to Germany the failure of her policy. Every sign indicated that Germany's aim was universal domination. There was small hope that Germany would be a peaceful member of a League of Nations until such ideas were eradicated. The only way of eradicating them was to show that they could not succeed.

REFUSAL OF PASSPORTS.

The executives of the British Trade Union Congress and the Labour party sent a deputation to the Premier with a view to securing passports in order to confer with the Dutch Socialist Troelstra, who was recently refused permission to land in England to attend the recent Labour Conference. Troelstra is now in Switzerland. The Premier announced that the War Cabinet refused passports because Troelstra lately traversed Germany. The executives subsequently passed a resolution of protest.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH OFFENSIVE.



The dotted line indicates the farthest German advance towards Amiens during the present year. The Allies had since pushed the enemy back at certain points by means of local attacks, and a few days ago he was compelled to withdraw to the eastern bank of the Ancre for some distance on either side of Albert. He also withdrew from the greater part of the ground, westward of the Avre and Doms (Dans), between Castel and Meanil-St. Georges. The black arrows indicate the direction of the Anglo-French advance on Thursday last.

Framerville, which is the farthest point of the present Allied advance, is situated about two miles north-east of Barbonnieres.

MEAT PRODUCTION.

AUSTRALIA'S POSSIBILITIES

LONDON, Aug. 8.

A deputation from the Empire Producers' Association waited upon Mr. Hughes (Prime Minister of Australia), to urge the development of meat production within the Empire. It was pointed out that reliance for cheap food must rest upon Australia, New Zealand, and South America. There were immense possibilities in Australia for the expansion of meat production. Even without Government assistance it could easily average half a million tons ten years hence. The deputation instanced the development in South Africa, which, before the war, did not ship any beef, but whose output in 1917 reached 23,000 tons; while the Canadian output had been revived under Government support. No physical difficulty was involved in the Empire being self-supporting.

The committee of the Empire Producers' Association asked for a preferential scale of tonnage dues, applicable only to British ships discharging at British ports, which would thus give greater control over the destination of meat. There was room for improvement in Australian beef. The Argentine raised her beef to a higher level than Australia, though there had been extensive stud improvements. The deputation suggested improved railway facilities for the transport of meat to and from freezing works. It was also essential that no rebates should be given to shippers. A standard quality of meat should be established. Better co-ordination and organisation were needed to meet huge American capitalistic competition. They should organise a continuous service of refrigerated steamers to cover the whole Australian and New Zealand supplies. It was desirable that meat should be handled in freezing works, and carried in British ships, controlled by British capital, and sold in the United Kingdom by British firms.

Mr. Hughes generally agreed with the views of the deputation. It was vitally important to encourage production within the Empire. The difficulties in the way of organisation were not insuperable. It must embrace those who produced and those distributing the products. There must be absolute control over the market, other wise organisation would be valueless.

AMERICAN MEAT COMBINE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.

A message from Washington states that the Government Commission has recommended governmental control through the railway administration of all stockyards and their treatment as freight depots so as to ensure open competitive markets, also the monopolisation of all cold storage cars, branch houses, and rolling stock needed for transport with the same object.

Recommendations have been made to suppress combines controlling the meat trade.

The Meat Combine Commissioners complained of a deliberate falsification of the returns which had been submitted to them, and deliberate lying on the part of witnesses.

WAR NOTES.

ANGLO-FRENCH OFFENSIVE.

As far as its initial gains are concerned there is every reason to be satisfied with the Allied offensive delivered on Thursday last, against the enemy's salient eastward of Amiens. It has undoubtedly been a pronounced success, and may give rise to a situation compelling the enemy to rectify his front and evacuate towns to which he previously attached the greatest importance. It will be well, however, not to entertain the idea that it is intended to achieve anything in the nature of a final and decisive victory. We shall probably be able to regard it in its true light if we view the present effort as one directed towards robbing the enemy of at least portion of the fruits of his first and greatest success on March 21 last. It is also well to bear in mind that every step which the Allies take in this direction relieves the pressure upon their important communication centre at Amiens. This latest Anglo-French attack on a twenty-mile front between Morlancourt, near the left bank of the Ancre, and Braches, on the Avre, has fallen along the greater part of the front of the big enemy salient stretching out towards Amiens. The most pleasing feature of the success is the rapid and extensive nature of the advance on the centre during the first day of the attack. At Framerville, immediately below the straight Roman road which runs eastward from Amiens to St. Quentin, the maximum depth of penetration had been achieved. This represents an advance of over seven miles during the first day, which certainly compares most favourably with previous offensives. It has carried the spearhead, which the Allies are driving into the enemy's line, to about half-way between Villers-Bretonneux, and the point where the Roman road crosses the Somme southward of Peronne. It already presents a danger to the enemy's line around Montdidier, as Framerville is within five miles of the railway junction below Chaulnes, the loss of which would mean the cutting of his main communication with the southern half of his salient. This very pronounced initial gain naturally suggests the possibility of important development. We have to remember, however, that the enemy also has not been long in recognising this, and is increasing his resistance accordingly. Whether he succeeds in preventing the Allies from reaching vital points behind his line or not, the result of Thursday's attack has certainly strengthened the belief that the initiative has definitely reverted to the Allies.

THE ADVANTAGE OF SURPRISE.

Not the least important factor in the attack was the element of surprise. Throughout the whole of their offensive efforts of 1918 the Germans have relied upon surprise attacks for their big successes. The long preliminary bombardment has been discarded for one of shorter duration and greater intensity. The results achieved by the enemy were of a nature to justify this change in tactics, and it would appear that the Allies have been ready to learn from the enemy in this respect. A correspondent states that the infantry was at it hard and after a three minutes' bombardment, and Sir Douglas Haig in his despatch makes a special point of the fact that the enemy was taken by surprise. It is quite possible that the Germans suspected that the Allies were preparing for an offensive move somewhere along this particular front between Albert and Montdidier. Their recent decision to withdraw their line across the Ancre and the Avre may be more readily understood in view of subsequent developments. That move was purely a defensive one, and the fact that the enemy adopted precautions to ensure better defensive conditions along the very front on which the Allies have since attacked him cannot be regarded as a mere coincidence. But, if he suspected an impending Allied offensive in this region, the enemy was evidently completely deceived as to the time selected for the opening attack and the form which the blow would take. Sir Douglas Haig shows that the concentration of the Allied storm troops was effected without the enemy's knowledge, and that the surprise thus sprung upon him led to very rapid progress on the part of the attacking troops.

"WHIPPETS" AND "BABY TANKS."

The surprise appears to have been heightened by the hazy conditions which prevailed, and by the effective operations of numerous light tanks, which the United Press correspondent refers to as "whippets." These are said to have "raced and dodged across the fields, spreading terror everywhere and running down the Germans." This description is somewhat similar to that supplied by Mr. Wilbur Forrest in the "New York Tribune" on July 1 last, regarding "successive waves of speedy baby tanks" which assisted the infantry during an earlier Allied attack between Villers Cotterets Forest and the Aisne. "A few of this species of tanks," said the writer, "the smallest yet of these modern warfare chariots, won a swift and glorious reputation as they faced and turned about on their caterpillars, helping the infantry to round up about 1200 prisoners. . . . I saw these baby tanks to-day waddling back through the forest of Villers-Cotterets, where their commander put them through their stunts. They came in 'male' and 'female,' according to whether they were armed with cannon or machine guns; the latter are 'females.' Though all alike, compared with other tanks they are what a woman might call 'cute.' They are so small that they turn quickly like a rabbit on a square yard of ground. Their motive power is simply a well-known type of French automobile engine operated by a chauffeur. The gunner, who constitutes the remainder of the crew, is able to pivot his weapon in any direction, slinging either a stream of bullets or shells wherever the Boches chooses to receive them." As far as one can tell at present, the "whippets" appear to be very closely related to the "baby tanks" described above.

They dropped bombs, he wrote, past all counting day and night with clockwork regularity from a height well beyond the reach of anti-aircraft guns.

"SMASHING THROUGH."

The Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, learned the news of the battle while en route to Leith to attend the national eisteddfod. He commented: "We are smashing through. We have won a great victory this morning."

RUSSIA.

Travellers from Petrograd arriving in Stockholm state that incredible terror reigns in Russia. The Bolsheviks are arresting all suspects, including 1000 officers. In the last few days several hundred have been killed. Famine and cholera are claiming masses of victims daily, and the disease is spreading to Moscow.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A Capetown message says:—A conference of central committees of the Nationalist parties of the four provinces assembled at Bloemfontein, and carried a resolution in full and enthusiastic agreement with the pronouncements of President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George that all nationalities should decide their own destinies, and not be compelled to live under an undesired sovereignty. The conference demanded that these principles should be applied to South Africa, so that complete freedom and independence, including the right to determine their own form of government, should be put within reach, and requesting the central committees to take steps to secure the above objects by constitutional means.

COMMONWEALTH LOAN.

The Commonwealth loan of £4,750,000, bearing interest at the rate of 5½ per cent., and issued at 99½, has been underwritten.

The final instalment of 50 per cent. is payable on November 22. There will be accrued interest.

LORD READING.

The "New York Times" in an editorial emphasises the splendid work done in the United States by Lord Reading, British Ambassador Extraordinary to America. Lord Reading, it says, was largely instrumental for the splendid success and co-ordination of the British and American war efforts.

AMERICAN SHIPBUILDING.

It is officially announced from Washington that the July launchings in American yards totalled 67 steel ships of 488,344 deadweight tons, 53 wooden ships of 18,700 deadweight tons, and three composite ships of 11,000 deadweight tons. In the same period 41 vessels of 235,053 deadweight tons were completed, of which 36 steel vessels were of 217,053 deadweight tons, and five wooden ships of 18,000 deadweight tons. The launchings exceed the yearly output prior to the war.

LATE WAR NEWS.

NEW ATTACK.

FRENCH CAPTURE FRESNOY.

LONDON, Aug. 9.

The British have taken 14,000 prisoners.

The British have reached the Framerville-Lihons line.

The French have taken Fresnoy.

FRENCH TAKE 3000 PRISONERS.

French troops north-west of Mondidier advanced four miles, and captured 3000 prisoners.

ANGLO-FRENCH ADVANCE

REACHES 11 MILES DEPTH.

The Anglo-French advance reached a maximum depth of 11 miles.

British cavalry are within a mile of Chaulnes.

EVACUATION OF MONTDIDIER.

French military opinion is satisfied the Germans must evacuate Montdidier.

PRISONERS INCREASING.

The United Press correspondent telegraphs:—The advance continues, amid growing enemy confusion. The British cavalry have taken further villages. The troops are approaching Chaulnes. The prisoners now probably total over 20,000.

CAVALRY CUT UP ENEMY.

In a further message the United Press correspondent says:—The British were unable to retain the summit of Chipilly, and fighting there continues heavy. Progress elsewhere is not hampered. Franco-British cavalry are cutting up the retreating columns. The bridges between Peronne and Brie have been destroyed.

GERMAN RETREAT.

FROM FLANDERS FRONT.

The Germans are retreating from the Flanders front.

The Germans are evacuating their positions in the Lys Valley in Flanders.

CAPTURES OF GUNS.

Mr. Percival Phillips telegraphs concerning the British advance east and south-eastward of Amiens:—A large number of low-flying aeroplanes participated when the light broadened sufficiently, shedding a terrible hail of bombs and machine-gun fire. So hazy was the atmosphere when the advance began that gunflashes often were invisible at 50 yards. It was just the weather for a surprise. The advance was uniformly rapid everywhere except at Morlancourt, where the enemy's positions were well fortified. The fighting there was continuous throughout the morning. Below the Somme the men literally vanished into the fog of war.

It is difficult to piece together anything like a connected narrative, says Mr. Phillips, because the fighting rolls away over a wide sweep of country, and it becomes impossible to follow. But prisoners are coming in in shoals, the trim condition of many of them indicating that they had been over-run, surrendering without a fight. One general, referring to the capture of guns, laughingly said: "It will take days to count them." The swift surprise of a drive of such length on a front of such depth did not give the enemy time to get his batteries away or even destroy them. The infantry in many places over-ran our artillery's support; but it did not matter because, firstly, we had advanced beyond where any German guns were posted; and, secondly, because we had plenty of German guns to swing round and serve. Our own batteries advanced with wonderful smartness. In one instance the whole field brigade got beyond the original front line, and were in action 30 minutes after zero.

We were successful in getting two companies of tanks across the Luce River under cover of darkness. They did invaluable work clearing up what was feared would prove a difficult situation, owing to the strong German positions in Dodo Wood and the neighbouring high ground. Such casualties as the tanks suffered were inflicted by gunfire from the south bank of the Somme. We therefore directed a converging attack against Boisgressaire and Chipilly, securing large hauls of prisoners and fieldguns in both places. Our men speak in the highest terms of the wonderful effectiveness of our barrage. The enemy machine-gun fire was less intense than was anticipated, doubtless owing to the smothering of their observation by the mist. The prisoners are a good type of soldier, but are depressed by the news of the Marne defeat.

WORK OF THE TANKS.

Major-General Maurice, military critic of the "Daily Chronicle," pays a tribute to the newest tanks' work southward of the Somme, where, recently, they had a dress rehearsal. The enemy was alert north of the Somme and in the neighbourhood of Moreuil, consequently the progress was less there than in the centre. But the centre of progress is the most important. The enemy at Montdidier is already in a pronounced salient, and the advance eastward of Villers-Bretonneux will make his position very uncomfortable. Already Amiens is out of range of all except the longest guns. More important still, the enemy was given no respite, keeping him on the defensive while getting up the "heavies" from the Vesle. It is premature to say definitely that we have won back the initiative, but we should if the battle develops as it promises. Sir Douglas Haig's success was due to the surprise, consisting of secret concentration, a short intense bombardment, and the launch of a formidable tank attack.

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

Correspondents declare that even the Messines battle did not equal yesterday's brilliant success.

THE MARNE BATTLE.

A Paris message states that 74 German divisions have been identified in the Marne battle.

BOMBARDMENT OF PARIS.

The bombardment of Paris by the German long-range guns is being continued.

ENGINEERS' STRIKE.

4000 MEN CEASE WORK.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is estimated that as a result of the engineers' strike in Melbourne more than 4000 employees, including members of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, have ceased work. There is little likelihood, however, of the strike spreading.

About 1200 ammunition workers at the Colonial Ammunition Company's works at Footscray have been thrown out of employment, and the management has been compelled to close down the factory owing to the absence of the engineers.

Men engaged in shipping repairs are out, with the exception of those connected with the Navy and with hospital ships.

The Williamstown shipbuilding yards are not affected.

NOT LIKELY TO SPREAD.

Mr. Hampson, the senior State organiser in Victoria of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, was in Sydney yesterday. He said that only about 1000 men were idle, as a number of the firms had agreed to grant the 30 per cent. increase in wages. Continuing, he said that a number of meetings were held before it was decided to ask for a 30 per cent. rise on account of the increased cost of living. In 1917 an increase of 6d per day was granted, but since then commodities had increased in greater proportion. They asked the Chamber of Manufactures to meet them in conference regarding the rate of pay, but that body delayed its reply, and members of the union became restive. The Department of Labour was asked to appoint a wages board to decide the question, but this was refused because the previous determination had not been in force for twelve months. The position having come almost to breaking point, the department was prevailed upon to call the wages board together. The board sat, and on the casting vote of the chairman a shilling a day increase was offered. This further exasperated the men, who decided that there was nothing left for them to do but to strike. The railways, with 500 or 600 of their members, were not affected. The engineers working for the Harbour Trust and other public trusts would go on as usual. The trouble was not likely to extend beyond Melbourne. The workshops at Geelong and Castlemaine were not drawn into the trouble. Mr. Hampson added that the Amalgamated Engineers were not under a Federal award. Each State had a separate rate of pay under a State award. The New South Wales engineers' rate was much higher than the rate prevailing in Victoria.

MEAT SUPPLIES.

AMENDED PRICES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Amendments made to-day to the meat prices order provide that the prices in the schedule are for cash at the place where the meat is at the time of sale. When the meat is sold wholesale on credit, interest at the rate of 2½ per cent. per month may be added to the scheduled prices. When delivery of the meat sold wholesale is made by the vendor the maximum charge which may be made by the vendor shall be as follows:—

(a) To places within a radius of five miles of the place of sale, delivery not exceeding five centals in weight, 2/6, over five centals, but not exceeding 10, 3/9, over 10 centals but not exceeding 15, 5/3; over 15 centals but not exceeding 20, 7/6; exceeding 20 centals, 7/6, plus 3/9 for every 10 centals in excess of 20.

(b) To places outside a radius of five miles, but within a radius of 12 miles, from the place of sale, double the above.

These amendments will come into operation to-morrow.

The Vice-President of the Executive Council, Senator Russell, said to-day that the appeal to patriotism by the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Watt, had hardly had time to reach the whole of the retailers, but there were indications that the position was easing. In official circles it is considered that, as the regulations have been extended to prevent the wholesalers passing on the extra charges to the retailers, they will not be likely to over-bid in future.

THE RETAIL BUTCHERS' CASE.

Mr. James Halton, of Halton, Ltd., butchers, William-street, Sydney, in the course of a letter on the meat trouble, says:—The Government did not say what price the carcase butcher was to pay the grower, nor did they tell the producer that he was compelled to sell at a fixed price. The Government went just half way and stopped, and we had chaos throughout the trade. The shortage of supplies has led to prohibitive prices, and it is not likely that the wholesale man will pay 1d per lb for beef and mutton and sell at 4d per lb, nor can the retail man buy at that figure and sell at the proclaimed prices. The position has become so acute that many of the most responsible retail butchers in Sydney may have to close their shops, at least, so far as the cash trade is concerned. I intend to give all concerned a practical demonstration of the profit and loss in this matter by closing my shop to a cash trade, which has taken many years of hard work to build up to its present standard, and it is to be hoped that something will immediately be done to relieve the situation, or great hardship will descend upon many who cannot afford loss and who certainly do not deserve it.

BELGIUM'S AGONY.

VIVID PICTURES OF HUN BRUTALITY.

FATHER VANDAMME'S ADDRESS

If there is anywhere a pacificist who is not very sure of his attitude he ought to hear the Rev. Father G. Vandamme. He is the gentleman who came recently from Belgium with a message from Cardinal Mercier, the protector of the oppressed Belgians. He speaks English with a pronounced accent, but he has a wonderful instinct for the right word and effective phrase, and his description of the behaviour of the modern Hun in Belgium is both convincing and moving.

Father Vandamme addressed a great meeting held at the Sydney University last evening, under the auspices of the University Union, and at the invitation of the students of St. John's College. He was most cordially received, and his passionate earnestness quickly gripped his audience. He plunged straight into his subject, "The Devastation of Belgium."

When war burst on Europe four years ago, he said, the first question was: "What will Belgium do?" and a thrill went over the whole world when it was found that Belgium would keep her word—and sacrifice everything. Belgium had suffered for four years—but the name of Belgium was blessed throughout the world. (Applause.) Before the war Belgium, only half the size of Tasmania, was so prosperous that it could give a living to 650 persons per square mile. "You could see its prosperity everywhere, then—but it is all gone now—gone by this terrible war."

"How did the war start?" With maps, brief historical references, the lecturer quickly told of how the Powers around Belgium guaranteed the independence of the little kingdom. By the treaty of London Belgium promised to defend her neutrality—"and," he added simply, "Belgium did her duty." Applause.) It is because we have done our duty that we have suffered. But our honour is safe. (Cheers.) The great crime was done by Germany. She promised to guard our neutrality, and, instead, she tried to steal it from us.

"Where is the King of the Belgians? From the very first moment of the war the King appeared in Brussels dressed as a soldier, and he has never left his army since. (Applause, and the audience stood while M. Albert Goossens sang "La Brabanconne".) Our King, our Ministers, and our Parliament were unanimous that we should keep our pledged word.

"What of our army? At the moment the war started we had only 135,000 soldiers, and they had to guard every front—against France and England, as against Germany. When the Germans crossed the frontier there were then only 25,000 Belgians to meet 150,000 invaders. But they fought, and other Belgians came up. My dear friends, 14 precious days were gained on the frontier at Liege by that little Belgian army, and everyone knows all over the world that, but for the time thus gained, the war would have been lost by the Allies.

"Let us look at the army—small, very quick, well trained. We started with 135,000 men, and we lost 100,000 in 2½ months. But we have now a new army of 250,000 men. Thousands and thousands of young men escaped from Belgium, risking electric wires, the shots of sentries, everything, and joined our men on the Yser. They are there now, well trained, eager, and they fight to-day along the Yser." (Cheers.)

Then the lecturer, having stirred his audience with the glory of Belgium, turned sharply to tell of what her nobility had brought her.

A photograph of helmeted Germans, swaggering through a beautiful street, was thrown on the screen. "Germans in Brussels," said the lecturer tragically. For four years they had been there, he said, wholly controlling Belgian affairs, robbing everywhere. "Money, money, they rob all, everything. They requisitioned horses, mattresses, blankets, coals, crops—our people starve"—and on the screen appeared a picture of Belgian men bringing in foodstuffs under the direction of fat German soldiers.

"They took from the people even their linen shirts. They plundered the houses of poor as well as rich"—the screen showed a number of broken safes—"and they burned the houses to hide their handiwork. Here are some of the ruins"—and then came touching photographs of poor people, weeping as they searched in the debris of their houses for some cherished possession.

More pictures appeared, showing towns before and after the Germans' arrival, and the sad voice of the priest went steadily on, giving the endless story of the German outrages. "Nothing was respected. Look here, this was a hospital 15 miles from Antwerp. There were women and wounded soldiers there. An aeroplane came and directed shell-fire upon it." The fearful heap of debris that was once the magnificent Cloth Hall at Ypres was the last of this terrible indictment of Germany as a master. "So has Belgium suffered," said the priest quietly.

"Here is a question I am often asked, 'Is it all true?' 'Are the Germans really so cruel as they are depicted?' I say, 'Yes; you cannot depict them as too cruel.' Listen: I will tell you what I myself have seen or know of." He told of priests tortured, old men murdered—more of the endless stories of German crime, wantonness, and brutality among helpless civilians.

STATE EDUCATION.

ECONOMY NOT POSSIBLE.

MR. JAMES' SUGGESTIONS.

BATHURST, Friday.

Mr. James, Minister for Education, made an interesting statement on the Government's education policy, and he also discussed the question of national economy, in an address at the annual speech day in connection with the Bathurst High School last night. He said that the State education system would more than favourably compare with any educational system in the world. The Fort-street High School boys and girls had won 58 exhibitions at the last leaving certificate examination, which was more than the number obtained by the Great Public and denominational schools put together. (Cheers.) Next in order were the Sydney boys' and girls' high schools, with 14 boys and 14 girls. By the "Great Public and denominational schools," Mr. James referred to Sydney Grammar School, Church of England Grammar School, Newington College, Scots College, St. Ignatius' College, and St. Joseph's College. The Government was starved for money, and could not purchase playing areas, as they would like to. They were, however, leasing certain areas, which for the time would overcome the difficulty. He had invited all denominations to come to their schools, and instruct the children in religion. If economy were effected in his department the building of schools would have to cease; and when they remembered that there was an annual increase of 25,000 pupils, and that the attendance at schools was 303,000 children, they would realise the harm that would be done if any attempt at economy were made by reducing the staffs. If he had his way he would tax the people one penny or half-penny in the pound in order to provide proper education for the children. If he could not do that he would go to the people for a loan of £500,000, and he believed he would get it. He did not believe that any tangible economy could be effected by a reduction in the number of legislators. If members' salaries to the amount of £22,500 a year were saved they could only build two schools with that amount, and then they had to remember that 95 members did more work now than 125 members did years ago. Mr. James stated that he had recommended to the Commissioners that motor trains should be run in the country centres for the convenience of children. The country should be dotted with high schools. He hoped to start a hostel in Bathurst soon, so that children from the surrounding districts attending the high schools could be looked after.

VOLUNTARY BALLOT BADGES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Recruiting, Mr. Orchard, to-day approved of a design for the badge which is to be issued to all men who enter the voluntary ballot for service in the A.I.F. The badge will be made of white metal, and will be about the size of a shilling. It will be in the form of a ring with the Australian Coat of Arms surmounted by a rising sun in the centre; on the shield of the Coat of Arms will be the letter "B" in blue, and on the ring will be the words "Voluntary Ballot, A.I.F." The making of the medals will be begun forthwith.

FLOOD IN THE MURRAY.

ALBURY, Friday.

Further heavy rain last night brought the total for the week to three inches. The Murray to-day is eleven feet above summer level, and rising. As the Upper Murray tributaries are rising, there is every appearance of another flood in the Murray.

RECRUITING.

At the Central Recruiting Depot on Thursday 31 men were accepted. Sixteen accepted volunteers in the country made the total for the day 47.

The best returns yesterday from the country route marches were:—Bellingen 20, Bowraville 19, Tenterfield 8.

Mr. R. A. Price, M.L.A., Lieut. Thomson, and Recruiting-officer Wilson addressed the recruiting meeting in Martin-place yesterday. The No. 2 District Guard Band assisted, and a number of men in uniform from the Central Recruiting Depot were drawn up around the new stand. Mr. Price said that he had just returned from a recruiting tour in the North Coast district. Private Jackson, V.C., who was assisting in the tour, and who had lost an arm, was ready and willing to go to the front again. Three volunteers came on the platform at the conclusion of Mr. Price's speech.

MR. WEAVER, M.L.A., ENLISTS.

It was announced yesterday that Mr. R. W. D. Weaver, M.L.A. for Willoughby, had enlisted for active service. He is to join the South Coast March to Freedom at Bateman's Bay on Monday next, and will return to Sydney to settle up his affairs, and go into camp. When he offered his services two years ago Mr. Weaver was rejected by the military authorities.

MEETINGS.

At 8 o'clock to-night, on the Corso, Manly, Lieut. Nicholls, Private Barrington, Private Eade, and Private Muncaster will appeal for recruits. Private Marlin and Corporal Stead will speak to-night at Wollongong.

The meeting in the Domain to-morrow afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock, will be addressed by Recruiting-officer Wilson, Corporal Hamilton, Private Scrimshaw, Trooper Atkinson, and Private Phillips.

At Ashfield Park, Mr. R. Windeyer, K.C., and Mr. A. G. Ralston, K.C., will address a meeting to-morrow, at 3 p.m. Lieut. Doull and Private Dyer, returned soldiers, will also speak.

The Sunday afternoon meeting at Manly (South Steyne grandstand), commencing at 4 o'clock, will be addressed by Warrant-officer Urquhart, and other returned men.

The Martin-place recruiting meeting on Tuesday next will be under the auspices of the Soldiers' Relations' Association, when it is expected that a number of soldiers' mothers will be on the platform. Any information which is desired in connection with the Soldiers' Relations' Association will be supplied by Mrs. Kitchington, 207 George-street North.

At the Leichhardt Town Hall, at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, 14th instant, Mr. David Storey, (Honorary Minister) and Mr. D. J. Doe, M.L.A., will be the speakers.

COUNTRY MARCHES.

TENTERFIELD, Friday.

The March to Freedom Column arrived at Tenterfield yesterday morning under Major Wynne, Captain Dally Watkins, and Lieut. Hughes, and the men were received with great enthusiasm. A civic welcome was extended by the Mayor, in the presence of a large gathering. They were entertained at a concert by the local branch of the Red Cross in the afternoon. A big camp-fire meeting was held at night, which was attended by fully 2000 people. Eight recruits mounted the platform. The column is meeting with success. At Guyra 14 men were obtained, with a prospect of 14 more. At Barraba 19 men were secured, and 12 at Werris. During the stay of the column in Tenterfield the men were made honorary members of the School of Arts, and were billeted out with the townsfolk.

INVERELL.—Privates Fisher and Govers, who returned on Saturday, were given a public welcome home in the Town Hall on Monday, at the meeting which carried with enthusiasm the resolution to carry on the war. Private Fisher is landlord of the Imperial Hotel, Inverell, which has been managed by his wife during his absence. Private Govers, who hails from Copeton, had three sons at the war, and enlisted with a fourth two years ago. Both of the returned soldiers are considerably over the military age.

TRADE UNION CONGRESS.

The New South Wales Trade Union Congress devoted yesterday's sitting to consideration of the scheme for the reorganisation of the unions. It was decided that the supreme governing body should be termed the grand council, and should consist of a president, general secretary, and two delegates from each of the six departments. The president and general secretary will be elected by the votes of the whole membership, and the delegates by a plebescite vote of their respective departments, and will hold office for a period of three years subject to being recalled in a manner to be provided. There shall be a provincial council in each State having general control over industry in their respective States, provided that State boundaries shall be disregarded where a portion of any State may be more conveniently controlled from an adjacent State. Such council shall consist of a president, general secretary, and one member from each department within such State. It was decided that there should be six departmental councils in each State, embracing all the occupations, trades, and callings grouped within their respective departments. Under the scheme there will be divisional councils in each State composed of one representative from each trade or calling grouped together within such division. Each trade or calling may constitute a trade section in any locality, or members in any number of callings may constitute such sections, which shal elect an executive committee together with a chairman and secretary, or such other officers as may be required.

FLYING THE RED FLAG.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Commenting to-day on the decision of the executive of the Trades Hall Council of Victoria to recommend that the red flag should be flown on each day of the year, the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Watt, said that when he received the first reply from the Trades Hall Council he wrote again asking that he should be informed definitely whether it was the intention of the council to fly the flag every day. He had since received an answer that pressure of business had prevented the council from considering the question at the last meeting, but that it would be discussed at the next meeting, and he would be advised without delay. Mr. Watt added that he had since written to the Trades Hall Council in Brisbane stating that his attention had been directed to the fact that it proposed flying the red flag. With that communication he had forwarded a copy of the letter which he had sent to the Trades Hall Council in Melbourne and asked that he should be informed of its intentions. In the letter to the Melbourne Trades Hall Council Mr. Watt intimated that he was aware that the red flag had different symbolic meanings to different people, but in his mind a decision to fly the red flag at this crucial war period was a direct challenge to the patriotic sentiments of a large majority of Australian citizens.

HOMES FOR SOLDIERS.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS.

The Minister for Repatriation has approved of an appeal being made in New South Wales for funds to provide materials for building homes for returned soldiers, under the voluntary workers' scheme.

Arrangements are therefore being made to hold a gala day and street collection throughout the State on September 13.

The Voluntary Workers' Association, which acts under special legislative powers, has branches in most of the suburbs and in more than 100 country centres. Already many homes have been built without cost for labour, and have been handed over to soldiers or widows of men who have been killed during the war. The number of applicants for homes under the scheme is, however, now greater than the existing organisation can cope with, inasmuch as, while there are plenty of willing workers who will give their services, money with which to buy building materials is not coming in fast enough to meet requirements. Delays and disappointment have naturally resulted from this condition, especially in outlying districts, and therefore a far-reaching appeal to the public has been decided upon with every confidence in the result. The intention is to raise a fund sufficiently large to enable the association to carry on more extensive operations without the necessity for going to the bank for financial assistance in respect of each home handed over, as has been the case in the past.

The headquarters of the organisation are at Eastwood-chambers, 19A Elizabeth-street.

PRODUCE TRADES.

TO BUILD SEVEN COTTAGES.

It was announced last night, at a meeting of the Grain and Produce Trades Voluntary Workers' Association, that those connected with Sussex-street intend to build at Matraville seven cottages for returned soldiers. Mr. R. W. M'Fadyen (president) was in the chair. Musical items were rendered by a band from Liverpool.

Mr. R. J. Mulholland said that when men in the grain and produce trade, in response to a challenge, went out to Matraville to shift sand and get the land ready for building, they found that there was something definite for them to do for the boys at the front. The committee had now decided to build seven cottages. For that purpose they would require £4000.

Dr. Arthur said that the Sussex-street men were "stickers." There was no excuse for the man who was prepared to let other men sacrifice everything, and yet do nothing himself. That was the meanest and most despicable spirit that could be shown. (Applause.) It was a scandalous thing to see thousands of young men at football matches on Saturdays. (Applause.)

Mr. H. Y. Braddon, M.L.C., moved,—"That this meeting approves of the scheme for building seven cottages at Matraville for returned soldiers and their dependents, and pledges itself to do everything possible to assist in the project, and bring it to a successful issue."

Mr. C. E. D. Meares (president of the Chamber of Commerce) seconded the motion, which was supported by Mr. L. C. M. Reed, of Chicago, and Chaplain Wilson, and carried unanimously.

Over £5000 was promised in the rooms. Two firms also intend to build a cottage each.

FATHER O'REILLY'S SPEECH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Leaving out of account the very doubtful compliment, implied by the assistance offered him by his sympathisers, the Bishop of Goulburn has particular reason to ask to be saved from such friends as "Layman." For the latter has apparently thrown over the Bible as the ultimate test of orthodoxy, and now declares those to be orthodox who subscribe to the three Creeds. In common with all our Catholic people, I subscribe ex imo corde to all three. Therefore, according to "Layman," we are all orthodox. Q.E.D. This finishes my references to anonymous correspondents, whom I intend in future to ignore.

Your readers will note that the Bishop still refuses to face my query. The reason is that he is logical enough to see the consequences that must flow from his reply. It was the Bishop who first brought against us the charge of being unscriptural, and I claim the right, as the party challenged, to conduct my defence in my own way. Hence I selected the tu quoque argument as the means of meeting his allegation. I contended that, if I am as scriptural as men occupying big positions in the Church of England, men who represent important aspects of Anglican thought, no Anglican bishop has any right to impugn my orthodoxy.

Bishop Hensley Henson stated that, in spite of the clamour caused by his nomination to the See of Hereford, thirty-three bishops had proffered him their congratulations. It is, therefore, much too late in the day to question his representative position. Lord Halifax, on the other hand, is the president of the English Church Union. And the "Church Times" was so moved by what seemed to it the enormity of consecrating Dean Henley Henson bishop, that it hinted not obscurely that it should be resisted to a finish, even if disestablishment should be the penalty of contumacy.

What harm, then, I ask once more, can result from the Bishop facing my thesis? Here it is again: If Lord Halifax is scriptural, Bishop Henley Henson is unscriptural. But, if either of them is unscriptural, then it follows that an important section of Anglicans is unscriptural. Therefore, before dealing with the alleged unscriptural character of our tenets, before undertaking to perform the kind office of removing the mote from my eye, would not the Bishop be better advised to extract the beam from his own?

When he was twitted, earlier in this controversy, with the desertion of their churches by Protestants, he fell back upon another line of defence. "There still remains," he said, "the question of the amount of real religion, diffused, absorbed, latent, yet in the day of crisis readily responsive, in the lives of casual attendants at church." But he is shelled from even this position by the big guns of Canterbury and York. In the report of the Archbishops' Third Committee on the Evangelistic Work of the Church, which appeared in English files of April last, their Graces state frankly that "the great majority of the people are without any conscious or explicit recognition of Christ as Saviour and King. All but a comparatively small minority of the nation are out of living touch with any form of institutional Christianity." The clergy, as the report further tells us, are regarded with suspicion by those outside the churches as the paid and prejudiced advocates of a joyless, powerless, and worn-out Church system, whose record of inertia in the face of great social movements is its condemnation.

This awful indictment, after four hundred years of Protestantism is far worse than anything I said at Goulburn. As a Christian minister, I deeply deplore the condition of things thus revealed. And let no Protestant do me the injustice of supposing that I should not far prefer to see our Australian people fervent Protestants rather than agnostics or neo-pagans. Naturally, believing, as I do, that, as a Catholic, I hold the doctrine once delivered to the saints, I wish from my heart that all should possess the truth of which the Catholic Church is the divinely-appointed guardian. But, failing that, I regard the wholesale defections from institutional Protestantism as fraught with evil for the days that are to come.

I am, etc.,

"JACK'S DAY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I would like to suggest in regard to fixing the date for "Jack's Day" and others that a day as early in the month as possible should be chosen. Many people are paid monthly, and in these strenuous times are apt to be rather short of ready money towards the end of the month. "Italy Day" was held just before the usual pay day, and I am satisfied that this had a considerable effect on the amount collected. "A.I.F. Memorial Day" was well chosen, being on the 2nd of the month.

SEVENTH WAR LOAN

HONOUR FLAGS FOR QUOTAS.

A POPULAR OBJECTIVE.

Following upon the determination of the amount that each municipality and shire is asked to find for the Seventh War Loan, comes an announcement from the Federal Treasurer that the realisation of the quota will in every case be recognised by the nation.

It has been decided to award an honour flag to every centre that reaches its quota. On all great occasions this flag will be flown, and for all time it will show that the people of centres that win it played their part in upholding Australia's credit.

The design of the honour flag has been approved. It is a full-sized flag. In the corner of a white field, bordered with red, is the blue Australian ensign. This emblem of patriotism will be eagerly sought by every town in Australia, and there is sure to be keen rivalry for the distinction of being the first to win it.

Provision has been made for special marks of honour for municipalities and shires that go beyond their quota. Where the quota is exceeded by 25 per cent. a bar will be added to the flag, another bar for 50 per cent. above the quota, and still another when the quota is 75 per cent. over-subscribed, and when it is doubled the flag will be decorated by three bars and a seven-pointed star. The greater the effort the greater will be the honour.

The honour flag will be flown over town halls and shire chambers. As time passes they will be greatly prized by every community as testimony that it backed up the fighting sons of Australia in the fight for freedom.

When the day comes for peace celebrations the honour flag will have special significance. The boys returning with their own tattered battle flags will look for the flags that will tell them that their home town did its part to help equip and maintain them in the firing line.

Another means of demonstrating active support to the Australian army will be afforded by house badges. The badge that has been adopted is a replica of the honour flag. In order that the badge should be democratic, each purchaser of bonds will receive one badge only for his or her full investment. The display of window badges as the campaign progresses will be a guide to canvassers as to who have and who have not subscribed to the loan.

It is also the intention of the central committee to erect a huge honour roll board in Martin-place. Daily reports will be received from all over the State, recording the progress made towards the amounts set the various communities to raise. As the quotas are realised by municipalities and shires they will be flagged as honour centres.

Without waiting for the terms of the loan, great activity is already being shown in the country districts. In over fifty centres committees are now well ahead with their organising work. Committees nominated in the following centres were yesterday endorsed by the Central Committee:—Burrowa, Cabramatta and Canley Vale, Camden, Culcairn Shire, Coonabarabran, Erina Shire (Gosford), Hornsby Shire, Narrandera, Queanbeyan, Rylstone, Shire, South Grafton, Temora, Tenterfield, Uralla, Wyalong.

The organisation is also moving in the municipalities of the metropolitan area, and by the end of next week all the suburbs should be in readiness to go full steam ahead.

In the list of quotas published yesterday the municipality of Broughton Vale was omitted. It has been assessed at £7500.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

MR. ALLARD'S INQUIRY.

POLITICS AND IMPROPER INFLUENCE.

Mr. G. Mason Allard resumed the public sitting of the Public Service Commission yesterday to take final evidence in respect of two sections of his Commission—with respect to any necessary amendments in the Public Service Acts and Regulations, and in to the administration of the Acts by the board.

Mr. H. Y. Braddon, M.L.C., on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, said he was there to give the views of the council of the Chamber. One of the difficulties the council had in discussing the matter was in determining the scope of the Public Service Board, and the district to be covered by it. In the council's estimation the most important point was whether a proportion of the members of the board should be business men.

The Commissioner: Can you give any indication as to what class of business men?

Mr. Braddon: To drop into the vernacular, one who has been through the mill. Continuing, he advocated the moving around of public servants so as to keep them from getting into a groove.

Mr. James Ashton, M.L.C., gave evidence in favour of retaining three members of the Western Lands Commission, instead of reducing it to one; also on the subject of placing the Lands Department under a Commission.

George Whitfeld, Acting Under-Secretary for the Attorney-General and Justice Departments, said he came forward to advocate that the heads of Ministerial departments should not be under the control of the Public Service Board. An Under-Secretary, he said, had not only to control the officers under him, and manage the staff, but he had also to consider the work of the department, and to see that it was properly done. He advocated the appointment of departmental boards to deal with questions of seniority in each department.

On the question of public servants taking part in political matters, the witness said it appeared to him to be a great mistake to allow them to occupy positions in political bodies, or to take an active part in political matters. "I do not see how a loyal public servant can possibly justify being in a position, and then going out to wreck the Government that he is a servant of. That is what is happening now by opening the door to public servants in that way," he continued.

The Commissioner: Does it affect the efficiency of a department?

Witness: No; it only leads to using influence really—political personages, the church, Masonic influence, and several other influences.

S. R. Dobbie, a representative of the Institution of Surveyors of New South Wales, and Brother Osmund, director of St. Joseph's College, also gave evidence.

THE KING'S MEN.

The King's Men movement continues to attract the loyal citizens of the State. Yesterday the membership roll was considerably increased. The executive, in making an appeal for financial assistance, mentions that there is much work to be accomplished, and it cannot be undertaken without the necessary funds. All those who have at heart the welfare of Australia are reminded that subscriptions will be thankfully received by Lieutenant-Colonel Rabett, C.M.G., at Fitzevan-chambers, 28 Castlereagh-street, city.

DEATH OF MR. EDWARD MACFARLANE.

Mr. Edward MacFarlane (formerly Under-Secretary for Lands) died yesterday, at his residence, M'Donald-street, Paddington. The late Mr. MacFarlane, who was the second son of the late Dr. John MacFarlane, was born at Sydney on January 11, 1850. He commenced his education at Fort-street School, and was a member of the class taught by the late Mr. F. Bridges (late Under-Secretary for Public Instruction). He subsequently attended the Sydney Grammar School for nearly eight years, and in 1865, after successfully passing a competitive examination, entered the Surveyor-General's Office.

In 1872 he took up the position of field assistant, serving first with Mr. District Surveyor Fisher, and afterwards with Mr. J. M. Tarves. After obtaining his licence his first charge was a drought-stricken district, with Canonbar as its centre. In 1878 he was appointed to the field staff of the Surveyor-General's office, with headquarters at Dubbo. In January, 1881, he acted as district surveyor at Bourke, and four years later was appointed district surveyor for the Bourke, Cobar, and Wilcannia land districts. In 1887 the land district of Wilcannia was added to the district under his supervision, so that he had charge of survey in more than 59,000,000 acres.

Mr. Macfarlane held the chairmanship of the Bourke Land Board from 1896 to 1899, when for health reasons he was transferred to Tamworth. The deceased gentleman was appointed Acting Under-Secretary for Lands on September 4, 1903, Under-Secretary in 1904, and he retired from the service on July 2, 1908. Since that time he had been actively interested in the estate of the late Mr. Henry Lynd Nathan.

In 1883 he married a daughter of the late Mr. James Horsfall, of Bourke. His wife predeceased him. He has left three daughters, all of whom are war workers in India. His only son, Captain Edward MacFarlane, was killed at the front. His brother is Mr. W. M. MacFarlane, C.S.M.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

There was a moderate demand yesterday for hardware. Kelly's axes were difficult to buy at 105/, and T.U.S. sheepshears were nominally quoted at 100/. Fencing material was still scarce and dear. No. 8 black wire was worth £54, and up to £62 was paid for No. 12 galvanised. Barbed wire was almost unobtainable. Amongst building materials galvanised piping was well held at 30 per cent. on list. For files 27½ per cent. on list price was wanted. Paint materials were offered at the proclaimed rates.

Jute met with a good inquiry. Country storekeepers operated freely in cornsacks at 10/1 on rail, and a fair business was done in woolpacks "close handy" at 7/9 net to rail. The market was bare of branbags.

Acids were not so firm. Citric acid and Italian tartaric acid, powdered and crystal, to arrive shortly, were offered by Melbourne houses at 4/3 net f.o.b.

Trade in brewers' goods was quiet, and prices were nominally unchanged. Victorian malt appeared to be scarce at 9/ net to rail, and the high rate of 10/ was asked for Brazil lump isinglass.

At the inquiry into the price of rabbit poisons yesterday it was testified by the representative of one firm that he had that day been offered strychnine out of a vessel recently arrived at 20/6 an ounce, and during the past few months had been offered the commodity at even higher rates. He thought that on the price ruling at the other end of the world the rate ruling here should be about half of what he was offered the strychnine at.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

Sydney is doomed to another butterless week-end. There was no butter on sale in Sussex-street yesterday, and no fresh supplies are expected before Monday. In view of the extreme scarcity, the following paragraph in the Melbourne "Argus" is interesting:—"The restrictions which have been placed by the Government on trade in butter are somewhat difficult to understand. New South Wales consumers complain of a scarcity of supplies of first grades, but Sydney agents have been drawing on this market to relieve the position. So far so good; but as a result of inquiries made in New South Wales, Melbourne merchants are advised that first grade butter had been shipped to Western Australia at a very recent date. Thus Victoria, which is at present barred from meeting Western demands, is expected to supply New South Wales, apparently in order that that State may be helped to capture Victoria's natural market." Bacon sold freely, sides at up to 1/, and middles at up to 1/2. Flitches were generally quoted at /11. VEGETABLE MARKET.

A large volume of business was effected at the Vegetable Market yesterday, and as supplies were fairly heavy, most lines were slightly easier. Cabbages and cauliflowers were plentiful, but there was a scarcity of choice beans and peas, which cleared well at late rates. Brown Spanish onions were again very firm. A steady market ruled for bunch vegetables.

MINING.

The news of another Allied offensive and the success thereof furnished ground for a healthy tone on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and a marked advance occurred. Barriers set a strong lead, but a slight reaction was noted in this section towards the close. Hills recovered 1/6, but sold at 73/9 forward later, while British rallied /7½ to 48/4½. Norths, after a rise of 1/ to 70/, reacted to 69/6, and Junction North fell /7½ to 16/9. Junction figured steady at 8/1. In connection with this stock, shareholders await with interest the announcement of the actual or probable date when the Amalgamated Zinc plant commences treating the Junction ore. New Burragorang recovered /3 to 3/6. Copper stocks accounted for a few deals. C.S.A. and Mount Morgan figured steady at late rates, while Hampdens were subject to "bear" operations, and finished /4½ lower at 17/1½. Gold ventures were favoured, and both local and Westonian enterprises displayed a firmer trend. Mount Dudley advanced /6 to 5/4, but came back to 5/2, while Hawkins Hill Central were taken at 2/6. The surprise of the Edna May group was Consolidated, which advanced 2/5 to 14/5. The recent developments in the Consolidated mine have been counter balanced by the arbitration case with the Edna May Company, but with the award of damages by the Warden almost in sight the stock has encouraged supporters. Centrals recovered 1/ to 18/, and Deeps moved up to 14/ forward in sympathy with Melbourne. The chances of an amalgamation between the Deeps and Central are expected to be within calculation in the course of about a week; and, while the fusion would benefit each company to some extent, it would be better for the future of the field if the Consolidated were included in such an arrangement.

All conditions being favourable, it was not altogether surprising to see a general advance in tin concerns. Local stocks were represented by 43 listed sales. Carpathias moved up strongly to 27/ and 26/1½ for the paid and contributing issues respectively. The now usual 6-ton yield for the week was announced for Vegetable Creek, which closed /10 higher at 12/6. Pond's Creek, on the simultaneous announcement of a good return, and the first dividend of /3 per share, rose /8 to 8/.

Malayan propositions provided exchange on a firmer basis also. Larut figured /6 higher at 74/, and Deebook moved up 1/6 to 24/6. Trong advanced 2/6 to 23/6 on noon 'Change, but receded to 22/10½ before closing time. A fall of 1/6 to 11/3 in Mammoth Molybdenite followed the issue of the annual report, though it was not attributed to any information disclosed therein.

MT. OXIDE MINES, LTD.

LIQUIDATION NEARING COMPLETION.

Messrs. H. B. Jamieson and W. H. Palmer, joint liquidators of the Mt. Oxide Mines, Ltd., have issued a circular in which they announce that the litigation which commenced in the Equity Court shortly after the company went into liquidation in September, 1914, has been terminated by the refusal of the Privy Council to grant leave to the late directors of the company to appeal against the decision of the High Court of Australia. In an action for damages instituted against the directors (Sir Albert J. Gould, F. W. Bacon, G. F. Allen, and T. B. Birbeck), Mr. Justice Harvey, of the New South Wales Equity Court, found a verdict of some £20,000 for the company. On appeal by the directors to the High Court of Australia this was reduced, and an inquiry ordered as to the amount, on lines laid down by that Court. Against this decision the directors applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, but without success.

The liquidators intend to distribute the assets of the company amongst shareholders, the assets consisting of 170,000 shares of £1 each in a company registered in England and known as Mt. Oxide Mines, Limited. The English company has a nominal capital of £500,000 divided into £1 shares, and purchased the mine in Queensland from the Sydney company. And the mine has been sold since to the Mt. Elliott, Ltd., for 82,000 fully paid shares of £5 each in that company. In consequence of the Treasury regulations in Britain, no settlement in respect of these shares can be applied for until after the war. Every 100 shares in the English company represents a fraction more than 16 shares (of a nominal value of £5 each) in Mt. Elliott, Limited. The liquidators find it necessary to dispose of sufficient of the shares in the London company to meet the obligations of the company, and offer for sale, by tender, 50,000 of the shares in the Mt. Oxide Mines, Limited (London).

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The Cup Meeting of the Canterbury Park Race Club provides metropolitan racegoers with an afternoon's sport to-day; the V.A.T.C. Australian steeplechase meeting will be brought to a close at Caulfield; Queensland Turf Club opens its winter meeting at Brisbane; the Goodwood Racing Club furnishes an outing for Western Australian sportsmen, and a race meeting will be held at Casino in this State.

Canterbury Park will be the racing rendezvous this afternoon, and the programme for the occasion is an interesting one, and includes the Canterbury Park Cup, for which there are two dozen acceptors, and big fields are also indicated for the other events. The transit arrangements by rail include ordinary and special trains every few minutes from 11.20, and the special horse train leaving Central Railway Station at 11.15 a.m. The sport commences at 1.15 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which Parrorn, Sweet Step, and Baura may occupy the places; Amadis, Duncannon, and King o' Malt may get home as named in the Flying Handicap; Lady Wildthorne, Lady Karamu, and Waterproof may pass the judge in order for the Maiden Three Years Old Handicap; Irish Dick, Call to Arms, and Some Boy may fill the situations in the Canterbury Park Cup unless separated by Mount All; the places in the Trial Stakes may go to Linfairn, Tree-toll, and Chain Lightning; and Toorak, Cerise Colours, and New Ireland may pass the post in order at the finish of the Welter Mile.

Our Melbourne representative telegraphs:—As the owner of Black Step, Mr. A. H. Carkeek, who died on Thursday, expressed a wish that the horse should run the Australian Steeplechase, it has been decided to give effect to this wish, and the horse will run.

C. M'J. (Wagga).—Br m Good News, by Savanaka from Princess, by Proctor from The Nun, by The Premier (imp.) from Lady Superior, by Artacon from Zuleika, by Forlorn Hope from Falkland (imp.) by Falcon. Lord Walla was foaled in 1906.

Joe (Castlereagh-street).—We have no record of it.

Our Melbourne representative telegraphs:—Lord Cecil is the most favoured horse for the Australian Steeplechase. Next in popularity are Cuffs and Cobram, followed by Booligal, and then Hobgoblin and Dalma. Westendale and Culleraine are next in order, followed by Obi, Wallalo, Black Step, and Jack Rice. Cumbin comes next, with Bricks last.

Messrs. Wm. Inglis and Son report having sold by m Sayhome, by Ninyas from Welcome Home, for India; but she will probably be raced here until shipping space is available.

Constant Reader (Marrickville): Peat started favourite.

V.A.T.C AUSTRALIAN STEEPLECHASE.

The V.A.T.C. Australian Steeplechase meeting will be brought to a conclusion at Caulfield this afternoon, and the bill of fare to be discussed should bring about high-class sport. The greatest interest is centred in the Australian Steeplechase, for which 15 remain in for the great cross-country contest, and among them are a number of the best lepers in Australia. Jack Rice heads the list with 12st 9lb, an impost which should be well within his compass; but his late performances have been of a discouraging character. Lord Cecil, with a couple of pounds less, wears a more attractive appearance, for he should be nicely suited by the weight, and evidently retains his form. Booligal should give a good account of himself, and Lord Grey promises to run a good horse. Westendale and Wallalo read well at their weights, and Cobram should be well in the hunt with 10st 8lb, while Dalma and Cuffs seem to have good chances. The battle promises to be fought out among Lord Cecil, Booligal, Lord Grey, Westendale, Cobram, and Cuffs, and the places may be filled by Lord Cecil, Cobram, and Booligal, unless Cuffs upsets the pot.

LATEST SCRATCHINGS.

The following scratchings were recorded yesterday:—

A.J.C. SPRING MEETING.

Derby Stakes: Lady Blundolph.
Epsom Handicap: Remmon, Prince Royal.
The Metropolitan: Erastus, Prince Royal.
All engagements: Girralong.

A.J.C. AUTUMN MEETING.

St. Leger Stakes: Serenata filly.

MELBOURNE SPORTING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Mr. A. H. Carkeek, the owner of Blackstep and Mintstone, died on Thursday. Mintstone was scratched for his Saturday's engagements, and it is not likely that Blackstep, who is an acceptor for the Australian Steeplechase, will start.

At Newmarket yesterday afternoon W. C. Yuille and Co. held a sale of racing stock of the late Mr. M. Quinlan. Among sales were:—Munster Lass, by Aurum—Coolaline, to Mr. G. Reilly, 100 gns; Clonkilty, to Mr. W. J. Sutherwood (Tasmania), 70 gns; and the sire Aurum, by Trenton—Aura, to Mr. J. Savage, 10 gns. Aurum was third in the Melbourne Cup in 1897.

BOOKMAKER KILLED.

Mr. Percy B. Hart, a well known bookmaker, of Cowper-street, Randwick, was killed in a motor accident between Campbelltown and Bulli Pass.

Mr. Hart, in company with another bookmaker, Mr. Levy, left Sydney in a car, and visited Waterfall and Bulli Pass. On the return journey, while approaching Campbelltown, Mr. Hart was standing on the footboard of the car, and when turning a corner the machine skidded and collided with a tree, crushing Mr. Hart, and fracturing several of his ribs and his collarbone. The car was badly damaged, but Mr. Levy and the driver managed to convey the injured man to Nurse Newbury's private hospital, Campbelltown. Mr. Hart, however, died shortly after admission.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S—"OH, BOY."

This afternoon at 2 o'clock, "Oh, Boy" will continue its prosperous run at Her Majesty's Theatre. The popularity of the new piece is founded on its tuneful music, bright ballets, and comic complications. Maude Fane, William Green, Gracie Lavers, Fred. Maguire, Connie Ediss, Maud Beatty, Field Fisher, George Willoughby, and Alfred Frith, are all well placed.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE.

"Business Before Pleasure" is convulsing packed audiences at the Criterion Theatre, where Nicholas Adams, as the dreamy partner, Mawruss Perlmutter, and James H. Waters, as the foolish Abe Potash, who is all heart, hit off to perfection the characteristics of the Hebrew speculators, when confronted by the alarming complications of the film business, plus a fascinating Vampire.

PALACE—THE BATES POST SEASON.

This afternoon and evening final performances of "The Masquerader" will be given at the Palace Theatre.

On Monday night Mr. Guy Bates Post will initiate the farewell appearances of his brief season, under the Tait direction, by the first production here of Edward Sheldon's emotional play, "The Nigger." The star will appear as Philip Morrow to the Georgina Byrd of Thais Lawton, supported by a strong cast.

PRISONERS IN GERMANY MATINEE.

Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce a matinee for Tuesday, August 20, in the Palace Theatre, by the American-Australian League of Help, for Australian prisoners in Germany, through the Australian Red Cross Society. A mammoth programme will include the Guy Bates Post company, artists from the Tivoli Theatre, Ben and John Fuller theatres, and Sydney James and Playhouse company. Tickets of the committee, at the Hotel Australia, and Nicholson's.

OPERA HOUSE—"SEVEN DAYS' LEAVE."

There will be the customary matinee at 2.15 to-day of "Seven Days' Leave," at the Grand Opera House, where the up-to-date military drama is again drawing great houses, with Allan Wilkie as Captain Terence Fielding. The fight with the Hun spies, the scene in the German military hospital, and the sinking of the submarine, move successive audiences to enthusiasm.

"SAMPLES" AT THE TIVOLI THEATRE.

A matinee will be given at the Tivoli to-day at 2.30, when "Samples" commences the second week of another prosperous season. AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

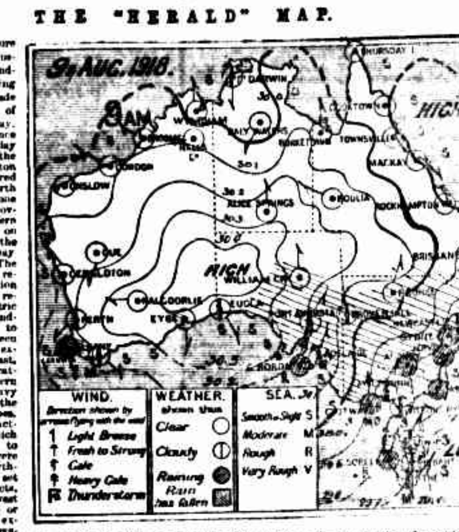
THE "HERALD" MAP.



The various pressure systems overlying Australia, and the surrounding oceans, have, during the past few days, made easting to the extent of about 500 miles per day. The cyclonic disturbance mentioned on Thursday as being centred to the west of Wellington (N.Z.), is now centred to the east of the North Island, whilst the one which on Thursday covered the south-eastern States was, at 9 a.m. on Friday, centred over the Tasman Sea, midway between Hobart and The Bluff (N.Z.). As a result of the co-operation of the latter with the relatively high barometric pressure which surrounded it, further light to moderate rainfall has been recorded generally, except on the North Coast, and only light and scattered in the northern districts. Some heavy falls also occurred on the south-western slopes. After a rather protracted period, during which unseasonably mild to warm temperatures were prevalent, with northwest winds, a change set in over inland districts, with the cool south-west winds on the advance, or eastern, side of an extensive high pressure system. The latter now occupies practically the entire mainland, and is rather energetic, the centre, 30.4 inches, being shown over the area to the north of the Great Bight. As this "high" becomes more established, temperatures should decline considerably, and frosts become prevalent again. The severity of the cold will depend on its future movements. If rapid easting is made, no very low readings should occur, but if only tardy or stagnant, the rapid radiation of the earth's heat would be conducive to approximately low night temperatures. Present indications favour cloudy and cold conditions generally, with further showers in the Riverina, and on the coast and highlands, with some snow on the southern tablelands, and equally west to south-west winds.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally west to south-west winds east of Borda and on New South Wales coast; elsewhere smooth to moderate.

NO MATTER WHAT SORT OF LAND YOU WANT, WE HAVE IT.

All kinds of Land—Sites for Mansions, Sites for Modest Homes.
Farms and Farmlets, suitable for all sorts of crops; Poultry Farms, Pig Farms.
Camp Blocks—Sites for Holiday Homes.
Business Sites. Choice blocks suitable for Flats.
You have no idea of the large and varied stock we carry till you see our Salesmen.
We can put only a small part of it in our advertisements, so if you want any kind of land, just call or write, stating what you are looking for, and let us see we can suit you, on VERY EASY TERMS and at prices which invite business. So don't hesitate. If no business results there's no harm done. Next to selling the land, we like talking about it.

HERE ARE A FEW SPECIALS:—

ASQUITH.

One of the most beautiful rural suburban districts in the State, and one which is rapidly progressing, and fast becoming a popular residential district. It is only 41 minutes' run by train from the Central. It is 600 feet above sea level, and highly recommended by the medical faculty as a fine healthy place to live in. Our Asquith Station Estate is right at the station gates, where we have choice sites, 50ft x 166ft, from 25/6 per foot, and on our EASY TERMS. These blocks have great prospective value.

TOONGABBIE.

Girraween Estate is right in the heart of Toongabbie, close to the Station, and 4 miles beyond Parramatta. It is reached by train from the city in 45 minutes. It is here that the business sites of Toongabbie will be, and the township will develop rapidly. Beautiful elevated and level blocks, 50ft x 200ft, are being quoted to-day at from £20 per block, and the easy terms of 20/ deposit and 10/ per month. If you see this land, we feel sure you will buy it. It is a rare opportunity for a man of moderate means to acquire a home. Our Local Agent at Wentworthville, Mr. H. Bellen, will be pleased to drive intending buyers over the Estate, and afford them the fullest information.

WOY WOY.

ETTALONG BEACH—THE MANLY OF THE NORTH. This can only be described as enchanting, delightful, and unsurpassed. It is within week-end range of the city, and only a two hours' charming train journey and a 15 minutes' run by motor from Woy Woy Station. It is right on the edge of THE MIGHTY BLUE PACIFIC. Conveniences are all over the Estate in the shape of good roads and footpaths, and spear-pumps are placed at suitable spots, so that a never-ending supply of good fresh water is always available for all. We are further improving this beautiful Estate by making substantial roads right along West and Railway streets. Last season's sales of this beautiful property was a record one. We are advising our friends to get in early in order to avoid disappointment, because we feel certain that during the coming season there will be a RUSH FOR BLOCKS. To-day you are able to secure fine camping blocks from £12/10/ to £25, and beach frontages at 45/ per foot. OUR EASY TERMS also apply.

CONCORD-MORTLAKE.

Great developments are going on in this district, and many inquiries are being received for lots on our Cosmos and Grasmere Estates, which are situated midway between Concord and Mortlake. The large Shipbuilding Works, factories, and other big industries are already REALITIES, and others will soon follow. Our land in this district is positively good; every block is valuable, and will be more so in the near future. The supply is limited, and the best advice we now tender is to secure a block at once. You will not have long to wait for a GOLDEN RESULT. Frontages of 50 feet are available to-day from 27/6 to 35/6 per foot. TORRENS TITLE, and our well-known EASY TERMS apply.

BANKSTOWN.

THREEBEES ESTATE (Big Bankstown Blocks).—This is a very attractive farming property, just under two miles from the Bankstown Railway Station. It is approached on all sides by good roads. Fertile soil, each block dipping gently to the Creek. It is subdivided into areas of 3 to 4 acres, and is just the land for small mixed farms. The surveyed line of railway from Bankstown to Liverpool just touches the Estate. It is selling well at prices of from £33/10/ per acre. On our usual EASY TERMS.
BORONIA PARK ESTATE.—A fine undulating property, three miles south from Bankstown Station. Close to all conveniences. Motor plies to the Estate several times daily. Deep, rich, chocolate soil, some of the best in the State. Already established market gardens there, supplying Bankstown and the city. Houses are being gradually erected all over the Estate. This is one of the best propositions we have for the small man. Acre blocks, £50 each. Half-acre blocks, £30/10/ each. TERMS: FROM £1 down and 10/ monthly.

TO OUR COUNTRY FRIENDS.

You want to have a share in the Land Bargains we are offering from time to time, but you can't see the land for yourselves, and don't want to buy a "pig in a poke."
We on our part always like people to see the land before buying it, because it will stand inspection.
Here's an offer to meet your case—

OUR "SEE-FOR-YOU" SLIP.
(C.4 U.)

Nominate someone in Sydney, whose judgment you can trust, and we will give him every facility to inspect. We will either run him out in our Car or take him by the usual means of conveyance, and pay his fare to any suburb, and, whether he recommends the purchase or not, we will part good friends with him.
Fill in this "C.4 U." SLIP, and send to us. We will do the rest.

THE BEALE PLAYER PIANO

AS AN IDEAL TEACHER.

In the early years of musical effort attainment seems difficult and far away. Youth is ever impetuous—easily discouraged. "Si jeunesse savait—si vieillesse pouvait." It is only with the latter years that full realisation for the necessary "grind" comes. The Beale Player-Piano helps to sustain youthful interest. It may be used to play the finest compositions in the musical world—with perfect technique and soulful interpretation. Then, when closed it can be used for practising purposes. You are invited to call any day to hear how instinctively human-like is the playing of the "Beale."

ARE YOU THE VICTIM OF ROUTINE?

Have you just drifted into the position you occupy, and been content to follow out routine work day after day? There are thousands in that position who need awakening to the possibilities that are before them. You can step out of the rut and make headway on the path of progress if you will train yourself for a better position. Why be content with mediocrity when success can be won by a little effort?

BE A SELF-SUPPORTING GIRL.

It is needless to emphasise the advantage of independence. The girls to whom we appeal are intelligent enough to realise what it means. But it involves study—earnest application to work.

We offer two practical alternatives to girls who wish to progress—one for those who can devote nine months to their training; the other for those who must quickly become proficient enough to earn money.

THE FULL ELEMENTARY COURSE,

extending over 36 weeks, covers thorough tuition in Shorthand, Typewriting, Bookkeeping, and Office Practice. Pupils become proficient to step into payable positions in any office. These positions are found by us. You have no trouble or loss of time.

THE SHORT COURSE

necessitates 4½ hours' study per day for three months. Stenotypy (the machine way to shorthand) and Typewriting are the subjects taught. Within the three months pupils are ready for positions.

These day classes are filling rapidly. They are reserved for girls only. Apply early for all details.

LADIES. WE'RE SWITCHING A SEARCHLIGHT ON CHOCOLATE MAKING. Twenty years ago nobody could learn Candy Making without an apprenticeship and a fat premium. Even then after serving 5 years at 2/6 per week pocket money nothing GOOD was learnt. ALFRED CROAKER AND DAUGHTERS started in AND ALTERED ALL THIS. We can and will teach U the secret of high-class candy making in one half day, which to the uninitiated sounds IMPOSSIBLE. Just so. That is why WE TEACH IT FREE WITH FREE MATERIAL, NOT COSTING YOU 1d TO PROVE IT IS TRUE. Don't you imagine ladies that our career has been ALL sugar and spice. Many firms would have succumbed to the adverse criticism by what is known in England as the "gutter press," but NOT CROAKER AND DAUGHTERS. Every attack spurs us on to greater efforts to make Australia self-supporting in Sweets. Actual members of our Firm are now engaged in teaching Chocolates and Sweets at 1 ALFRED-CHAMBERS, CURRIE-STREET, ADELAIDE, AND QUEEN'S HOTEL, TOWNSVILLE, and like the tactics of the Western Front the more we're attacked the more ammunition we will prepare to withstand it, and the more arms we will throw out through Australia even if we have to weaken 'Frisco and London staff to do it. BECAUSE if we're worth powder and shot even from the lower order of journals it's a sure sign our work is being felt. We ask U, LADIES, to consider this proposition of ours and call and view only; or name and address brings free particulars how we cause U by Post to make profitable chocolates at home with free material carr. pd., AND EARN MONEY. TWO BIG NEW FEATURES: NOISELESS TYPEWRITER, SUMMERHAYES SHORTHAND, are this year being handled by the METROPOLITAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, LTD. The NOISELESS TYPEWRITER (1918 model) needs only to be seen and worked to be appreciated. Absolutely noiseless—light, responsive touch—perfect carbons and stencils. These machines will be a perfect god send to both business men and typistes. They make a QUIET OFFICE possible, and save all NERVE and FINGER strain. There are THREE installed in our own office, and visitors are unaware of the presence of typewriters until they are pointed out. COME AND SEE THEM. SUMMERHAYES SHORTHAND is the invention of the Principal of the Metropolitan Business College. It is a highly developed system, yet it is very easy to learn. It has HIGH SPEED, the notes are remarkably expressive; and much greater accuracy is therefore possible than under the older systems. The vowels are "built-in" in the outlines, and the notes may be written on unruled paper. There are no complications, and NO EXCEPTIONS TO RULES. We are still teaching the Isaac Pitman Shorthand just as thoroughly as ever. This is shown by the fact that in the latest I.P.S.A. Shorthand Theory Exams. we won TWO OUT OF THREE firsts, and carried off 30 out of 41 "Distinction" Certificates awarded. METROPOLITAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, LTD. Directors: T. S. Summerhayes, J. A.
